PLOT TO WRECK HOOVER TRAIN

MECHANIC KILLED, LOSS SIX MILLIONS IN HOLLYWOOD FIRE

Film Blast Blamed; Many Are Rescued; Pictures Lost

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24. — One man was killed and a half dozen other persons were injured in a $6,000,000 laboratory fire that was quelled early today after a five hour battle.

Fire in a film negative stock room of the Consolidated Film Laboratories Inc., shortly after midnight, caused an explosion that swept the plant with flames.

Al Lund, a mechanic, was suffocated by the fumes of burning chemicals after he had striven to halt the fire.

Lund, 35, staggered into the street and collapsed. He was dead when a fire department rescue squad took him to a hospital.

Mrs. Irene Beardsley, Glendale, Cal., was rescued by firemen so badly burned she may die.

J. G. Nieman, whose heroic rescue of twenty girl workers, trapped in the fire swept halls, made him the outstanding hero of the fire, was critically burned.

Two persons were believed to be missing in the debris.

Miss Annette Anderson, also a victim of burns, accounted for the fire according to an unofficial report early today. She said she heard an explosion in a store room not far from the polishing machine she was operating. The blast set fire to a quantity of negatives.

The explosion of the negative gave warning that probably saved the lives of fifty or more occupants of the building.

All the engine companies of Hollywood and Los Angeles were called into action before the fire was controlled after daybreak.

Part of the battle was to keep the blaze from attacking the huge Paramount-Famous-Lasky studios across the street from the consolidated laboratory.

Flames leaped to some of the open stages of the Paramount and R. K. studios. Automobiles parked along the street by workers of the film laboratory were burned to a crisp by the intense heat of the burning chemicals.

Other explosions followed the first one, as the flames spread to vaults and drying racks, where a large number of "master negatives" of seven of the leading producing companies were stored for copying or repair.

Some of the films lost were irreplaceable, according to studio executives.

Among the master negatives reported were those of "Rio Rita," "Untamed," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Hell's Angels," "Hallelujah" and others.

"Untamed" was the first co-starring picture of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

The second explosion unroofed the laboratory, spreading the fire, as the release of inflammable gases sent the flames high in the air.

The torch of fire threw a weird glow over Hollywood as chemicals stored in the building colored the flames with an auroral light.

Until the raging inferno of chemicals and films had died down, firemen could do nothing except prevent the spread of the fire to nearby structures.

They helped lead women and male employes out of the building while choking fumes sent many gasping from the nearby streets. Several persons were slightly injured by the acrid gases.

The lost in master negatives could not be estimated until producing companies check their studio records, according to William Lebaron, vice president of R. K. O.

CLEMENCEAU HAS SUFFERED RELAPSE

PARIS, Oct. 24.—M. Georges Clemenceau, war-time premier of France who recovered miraculously from a severe heart attack early this week, suffered a relapse today.

The "tiger" found difficulty in breathing in the early hours of the night, and later his condition became so aggravated for a considerable period he experienced choking sensations.

Oxygen was administered through a tube to give relief.

Dr. Charles Laubry, his personal physician, and Dr. Degeunes, who treated the late General Foch in his last hours, held a consultation at the bedside this morning. They found Clemenceau much improved, but once again besought him to relinquish his incessant labors and take a thorough rest.

PRINCE UMBERTO OF ITALY MADE TARGET OF ASSASSIN'S GUN

Young Student Is Foiled In Effort To Slay Umberto

BRUSSELS, Oct. 24. — Guided by his "conscience" which he said made his duty clear, a young Italian student at the University of Sorbonne today made an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Crown Prince Umberto of Italy during a solemn service at the tomb of the unknown soldier here.

The would-be assassin, taken into custody immediately after the attack, is Fernando De Rosa, 21, a law student, and a native of Milan, Italy.

He fired point-blank at the crown prince just as the latter arrived at the unknown soldier's tomb to lay a wreath as a mark of respect. The bullet went wild, and the prince and his entourage continued with the ceremony, ignoring the attack entirely.

With his face swollen from the beating he received at the hands of the outraged crowd which set upon him immediately after the attack, De Rosa told his story brokenly to the police.

He said he had come to Brussels from Sorbonne for the sole purpose of shooting the prince.

"My motive was my conscience," he said. "As a member of the Second Internationale (Communist organization) I saw my duty was to try and assassinate the prince."

One of the first to felicitate the crown prince upon his narrow escape was Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, to whom his engagement was announced only yesterday. King Albert of the Belgians called personally at the Italian embassy and expressed to the Italian ambassador, Marquis Durazzo, his regrets over the attack.

Princess Marie emotionally praised Prince Umberto's courage and his unflinching attitude. Never moving from the spot where he stood when the shot was fired, the prince waited until the excitement had died down, and then continued with the ceremony.

Extraordinary precautions had been taken by the Brussels police to guard against any such attack as that which nearly resulted in tragedy today.

That considerable feeling existed in the city over the forthcoming marriage was evidenced last week, when it first became known officially that Crown Prince Umberto and Princess Marie were to be married.

A group of about thirty demonstrators, believed to be anti-Fascists, raided the Italian embassy, throwing stones and other missiles and breaking a number of windows. The perpetrators of the demonstration were arrested, and scores of known anti-Fascists were rounded up and threatened with deportation.

HOPE IS ABANDONED FOR DITEMAN AFTER FAILURE TO APPEAR

Atlantic Holding Secret Of Daring Solo Flyer

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Oct. 24.—Officials of the Cunard line here today were endeavoring to confirm a report that the Cunard liner Soythia had intercepted a wireless message from the steamer Kyle that a third, and unnamed vessel, had picked up the wreckage of an airplane supposed to have been that of U. F. Diteman, trans-Atlantic flyer.

LONDON, Oct. 24.— Hope for the safety of the daring solo-flier Urban F. Diteman, Jr., was given up here today after an all-night watch by coastal radio stations and land lookouts over Ireland and England as well as ships at sea proved fruitless.

All night the great flood lights of Croydon airfield glowed vainly in the hope that the gallant Montana cattle man would make a belated arrival on his attempt to span the ocean from Harbor Grace.

A brief stir of optimism followed reports from Copenhagen that Diteman had ordered a quantity of gasoline cached at Julianshaab, Greenland. But when no dispatches were received from Greenland telling of his arrival there and when reports from the United States were received stating that Mrs. Diteman was certain he had attemped a direct flight to London, this soon died out.

England had prepared itself for a rousing welcome to the daring American. Diteman's claim to descent from Sir Frances Drake and christening of his plane after Sir Francis, famous roving Galleon, Ye Golden Hind, had added to the color of his enterprise, from the English view.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The grim Atlantic today held fast the fate of Urban E. Diteman, Jr., the Billings, Mont., cattle man who dared its wide expanse in a tiny open monoplane Tuesday and hasn't been sighted since.

As the hours passed, anxiety for the gallant six-footer who left Harbor Grace, N. F., at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday in a manner so casual that no one thought anything of it and then startled the world in a note he left behind announcing his destination as London, turned to virtual certainty today that he had fallen prey to the pre-winter storms of the North Atlantic.

One ray of hope pierced the gloom which followed the failure of any ship or any coastal community of the British Isles to sight him.

A dispatch from Copenhagen stating that Diteman had ordered 600 litres of gasoline placed at his disposal at Julianshaab, Greenland two months ago, gave rise to hopes that the daring westerner had changed his course and headed for that place instead of straight across the Atlantic.

But his wife, who with her two young sons, is still confident that Diteman will turn up safely some place, punctured this hope by stating that although it was her husband's original intention to fly to Europe by way of Greenland, he had determined upon a direct non-stop flight a few days before hopping off.

In the note he left behind, Diteman himself estimated that his gas supply of 165 gallons would carry him to London in about twenty-five hours with an adequate margin of safety.

But this morning more than eighteen hours over that estimate had passed without news. Builders of his plane, the smallest ever to be used in a trans-Atlantic attempt, stated that his 771 pound craft could easily remain afloat a number of hours if he were forced down, but aeronautical experts feared the rough seas of the Atlantic would soon smash his frail craft to bits if that is indeed what happened.

Diteman carried no radio and thus was unable to communicate with any of the numerous ships strung across the Atlantic on his course.

Inventor Appears Well; Traveled In Ford's Car.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 24.—Smiling happily and apparently well physically, Thomas A. Edison, noted inventor, returned to his home here today after participating in Henry Ford's observance, at Dearborn, Mich., of the Edison golden light jubilee.

Edison and party arrived at 8:30 this morning on the White Light Limited of the Lackawanna Railroad. He was all smiles as he stepped off Ford's private car, "Fair Lane," in which he made the journey. He wore a black derby and black, crinkled overcoat.

"Well, it was a good trip—a very good trip," he remarked. "I had a very pleasant tmie. Mr. Ford is all right."

Mr. Edison had to walk about 400 feet to his automobile. His step was more springy than when he left and he seemed to be in better physical condition in spite of the emotional stress which overcame him during the course of the tribute to him at Detroit.

Included in his party were Mrs. Edison; Theodore Edison, son of the inventor and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sloan and their two sons. Mrs. Sloan is a daughter of Edison.

Edison's private car was filled with flowers.

FEAR 52 LOST ON LAKES

MISSING CAR FERRY OVERDUE; VESSELS REPORTED AGROUND

Worst Lake Storm In Years Ravages Lake Shipping

By I. N. S.

A lake vessel with fifty-two men on board was believed lost today and three other lake craft carrying a total of seventy-three men were in danger of being pounded to pieces as the worst storm in many years ravaged the Great Lakes region.

All available craft on Lake Michigan turned to the search for the missing car ferry Milwaukee which carried fifty-two men on its voyage from Milwaukee to Grand Haven, Mich., officials of the grand trunk ferry feet have practically given up the ship for lost.

The steamer William E. Pilkey is aground and in danger of going to pieces off Detour, Mich., at the Soo. It has thirty-two men aboard.

Twenty-five men are reported to be aboard the steamer Maple Court which is aground near Cockburn Island, Lake Huron. The Maple Court's hold is filling rapidly as the waves continue to pound it on the reef.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—With Lake Michigan still a sea of fury in the worst lake storm in decades, searching coast guard crews today renewed their hunt for the car ferry Milwaukee, with fifty-seven men aboard.

Coast guardsmen along the eastern shore of the lake risked their lives in the gigantic waves in a vain effort to locate the missing ship yesterday afternoon and last night.

The Milwaukee carried fifty-seven men when it left the port of Milwaukee at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. At midnight last night it was thirty hours overdue. The ship was carrying twenty-seven carloads of merchandise to Grand Haven Mich.

The vessel is valued at $500,000 and carried no wireless, according to officials at Milwaukee. Fears for the Milwaukee's safety recalled the fate of its sister ship, the Pere Marquette, which went down near Sheboygan, Wis., in 1920, with a loss of thirty-three lives.

Airplanes today were preparing to go aloft if the weather permits and aid in the search for the missing vessel.

Coast guardsmen returning from the search declared the storm was the worst they had ever seen on Lek Michigan.

Other appeals for aid in finding missing boats were received by coast guard stations, indicating that fully 100 men on lake craft are unaccounted for.

Millions of dollars worth of property has been destroyed here and at other points along the shoreline.

AIR CIRCUS IS STILL MISSING

Already one day behind their schedule, the four green and gold airplanes of the Empire Air Circus, which were supposed to arrive in Xenia for a three-day series of exhibitions Wednesday noon, are apparently in the same category as the trans-Atlantic flyer, Urban F. Diteman, Jr.,—missing and unreported. A heavy fog prevented the flyers from leaving Mansfield, O., Wednesday and as nothing was heard from the planes by Thursday afternoon it was the supposition that fog had again delayed the departure for Xenia.

BANDITS WOUND GROCERY KEEPER

DAYTON, O., Oct. 24.—David O. Leslie, 64-year-old grocer, is today suffering from a gunshot wound in the neck which was inflicted by one of two negro bandits who entered his store last night just before closing hour and escaped with $25.

Leslie was wounded when he did not comply quickly with the negroes' demand to open up the cash register. His hurt is not serious.

FEAR DARING LONE OCEAN FLYER IS LOST

COLLEGE ATHLETIC SITUATION ROCKED BY CARNEGIE PROBE

Subsidized Sports Attacked; Denials Issued

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Rocked giddily upon its pedastal by the report of the Carnegie foundation, specifically condemning the conduct of sports in eighty-four of the 112 institutions surveyed, collegiate America today was rallying with denials of the perfidy charged against it. College presidents whose institutions were named in tones of opprobrium were not slow to deny the existence of conditions such as the foundation's committee claimed to have found. Deans and athletic heads were being quoted at length and in the same vein.

But in the midst of the denials, the foundation's report remained in black and white, a 383-page document that stood as a scathing indictment of sport in the American College at large. It did not level its attack in terms of vague generalization, either. The result of what is purported to have been three and one-half years of intensive study, it attacked specifically, the names of some of the most revered of our institutions being bandied about indiscriminately.

All told, 112 colleges, appor-

WHAT IS NEEDED

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—In its lengthy bulletin on college athletics, the Carnegie Foundation advocated, among others, the following reforms:

1. Reorganization of athletics to give true faculty control.

2. Elimination of paid coaches.

3. Elimination of personal exploitations, luxurious equipment and expensive traveling accommodations.

4. Increased responsibility of students in the conduct of their athletics, with more emphasis on intra-mural sports.

5. Greater emphasis on the intellectual development of the students.

6. More reliance on the athletic physician in the determination of events, engagement of coaches and trainers, arrangement of diets and decision as to which players are in condition to participate.

FOUR CHILDREN SLAIN BY FATHER WITH GAS

Mother And Fifth Child Fighting For Lives; Hamilton Barber Sought For Wholesale Killing; Neighbor Finds Crime.

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 24.—Their lives claimed by gas, which Coroner Edward C. Cook says, had been turned on by their father in a murder attempt, four little children are dead here today and their mother and another child are fighting for their lives in a hospital, where, doctors said, they will probably die.

Charles King, Sr., 36, a barber, the father and husband, is being sought by police and the coroner said he would be charged with murder when captured.

Authorities at Coldwater, Mercer County, where the family recently resided, have been notified as it is believed King may have fled to friends there for shelter from the far-reaching arm of the law.

The four dead are Keith, 5; Paul, 10; Leon, 12; and Robert, 14; Mrs. Sarah King, the mother, and a fifth child, Charles, Jr., 6, are seriously ill in the hospital and will probably succumb.

The tragedy occurred in the family's rented five-room modest frame dwelling here. The bodies and the two victims were found when a neighbor, Edward Osborne, 21, detected the odor of gas and broke into the house.

He found the mother and Charles, Jr., laying on the floor in a downstairs room. The bodies of the four children were found in their beds upstairs.

STOCK MARKET SLUMP CARRIES ON DESPITE RECORD TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—With blocks of 10,000 to 15,000 shares changing hands, trading continued at a terrific pace on the stock market today. The first half-hour of tarding was featured by heavy selling but early gains and losses practically offset each other.

A record transaction was that of Cities Service, which opened with a block of 150,000 shares on the curb exchange at $55.75, a loss of $3.25. Practically wiping out last night's loss, Kennecott Copper opened with a block of 20,000 shares at $78, an over-night jump of $11. A new low for the year was hit by General Motors, which opened with a block of 20,000 shares at $56.50, down $1.

Among the issues opening $1 to $1.75 higher were American and Foreign Power, United States Steel, Gold Dust, General Electric, Atchison and American Telephone.

NARCOTIC PROBE AT LONDON PLANNED

LONDON, O., Oct. 24.—Reports, which are current in official circles here, today indicated that a federal narcotic investigation may be under way here or planned for the near future.

It was learned that narcotic agents have visited London in the past few days and it is reported the visits are a forerunner of an extensive investigation into "dope" conditions in this county.

No confirmation of the reports has been possible, but it is believed they are founded, on facts.

TWO ARRESTED AFTER AUTO IS LEFT ON RAILS

Attempt Foiled At New Albany, Ind.; President Safe

IS SECOND ATTEMPT

Believe Woman Hoped to Kill Executive Some Time Ago

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Oct. 24.—Two men were under arrest here today on suspicion that they deliberately tried to wreck the special train that was carrying President Hoover and party to Washington from Louisville.

The men, in custody of Sheriff W. R. Helm of Floyd County, Ind., are said to have abandoned an automobile on the tracks in the path of the onrushing train.

The men under arrest gave their names as Charles W. Bullock, 19, and Young Wright, 43, both of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Sheriff Helm said he questioned the men at length, but all they would admit was an intention to wreck the automobile in order to collect insurance on it.

The sheriff said he has wired Jeffersonville authorities in an effort to trace the men's record.

The automobile was discovered in time and removed from the track without damage to the machine or to the train.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Attempts to wreck the train bringing President Hoover from Louisville, Ky., to Washington, were reported to the United States secret service today.

Joseph Murphy, assistant chief of the secret service, said two men are under arrest at New Albany, Ind., for "interfering with the train."

Murphy said this was all the message said. He doesn't know the method used to wreck the presidential special; whether interfering with the car wheels or tearing up or placing obstructions on the tracks.

"The men are arrested out there,

LEGLESS FLYER'S AUTO KILLS YOUTH

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Oct. 24.—Injuries which he sustained when he was run down by the automobile of M. R. Daugherty, legless and one-armed New Martinsville aviator, caused the death of Raymond Lopez, 19, in a hospital here, today.

Daugherty, who was driving the "death automobile" was not held by authorities. He gained notoriety a year ago by starting a trans-Atlantic flight which ended in Pennsylvania.

WITTENBERG GETS $200,000 GIFT

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 24.—The endowment fund of Wittenberg College, a Lutheran school here, is richer by $200,000 today, the gift of an unknown donor.

The bequest was made known at the meeting of the Indiana Lutheran Synod, at Anderson, Ind.

Another gift, $50,000 was given the college for the establishment of an astronomy department by Elgar Weaver, of Brookline, O.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Oct. 24. —Due to the cold weather and the fact that the heating systems have not been completed, all of New Lexington's grade schools have been closed until Monday.

A temperature of 33 prevails here. Snow began falling this morning, but it melted quickly.

SITUATION ROCKED BY CARNEGIE PROBE

tioned geographically, were visited since the survey began back in 1925. Only twenty-eight could be given a clean bill of health, the report said. The immaculate twenty-eight, of which not more than a half dozen are major intitutions, follow:

Bates, Bowdoin, Carleton, Chicago, Cornell, Dalhousie (Canada); Emory, Illinois, Laval (Canada); Marquette, Massachusetts Aggies, Massachusetts Tech, Ottawa (Canada); Queen's (Canada); Reed, Rochester, Saskatchewan (Canada); Toronto (Canada); Trinity, Tufts, Tulane, U. S. Military Academy, Virginia, Wesleyan, Williams, Wooster College and Yale.

These lilies in the field represented just 25 per cent of the colleges visited and seven of them were Canadian colleges, at that.

Of the rest, some were openly condemned and at others a finger of scorn was pointed. The charges ranged from undue influence in the obtaining of campus positions for athletes to the actual maintainence of these men in school without visible means of support. And the schools at which atletic systems did not meet, wholly or in part, with the committee's favor were named without apparent reluctance.

Among their number were some of the greatest institutions of learning in the land—Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Michigan, Ohio State, Vanderbilt, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Purdue, Minnesota, Notre Dam, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Alabama, California, Southern California and Stanford, to name only a few. Not all of them were alleged to be wholly reprehensible in their conduct of athletics. But, as to that, the committee, composed of Dr. Howard J. Savage, John T. McGovern and Dean F. Smiley, M. D., rendered an exhaustive individual analysis and let the reader judge for himself.

The meat of the survey is found in the chapter headed, "The Recruiting and Subsidizing of Athletes." Here what are alleged to be individual instances are quoted in the following paragraph:

"Athletes at a number of universities have been subsidized under the guise of salesmen of insurance or bonds (Columbia, Wisconsin); clothing store clerks (California, Drake, Ohio State); agents for business firms (Colgate, University of Iowa, Southern Methodist, Wyoming); sporting goods salesmen (Dartmouth, Drake, Texas, University of Washington, Wyoming); motion picture employes (Southern California); advertising solicitors (Michigan, Missouri, Northwestern, Pennsylvania); companions of children (Denver, Harvard); writers (Michigan) and otherwise."

At this point, the report drily adds that it probably hadn't occurred to the athlete so employed that he was "professionalizing himself by trading on his athletic skill or reputation."

It goes considerably further with Princeton and New York University, which it charges with "wholly or in part maintaining athletes at secondary schools until they are ready for colleges. And it goes whole hog with Fordham in declaring that its scholarships for athletes are supplied by the athletic association, requiring those favored to do no outside work at all.

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the foundation, wrote the preface to the report. In this he makes two major declarations, as follows:

1. The paid coach must go.

2. Big gate receipts, the training table, expensive railroad trips, subsidizing and proselyting and the system of "putting the good athlete but the weak scholar across the hurdle of examination," must be eliminated and the inter-college and intra-mural type of athletics substituted.

These, it is declared, are the remedies for what is termed "the darkest spot upon American college sport." The blame, however, is not laid upon college athletics. It is placed against the "ultimate authorities," the heads of institutions, etc. Boards of trustees, it is maintained, leave the question up to presidents; presidents pass it along to athletic managers and so on, the report declares.

"The "abuse," as it is called, is not confined to any particular section of the country, the findings add. This ranges, it seems, from "rare and casual contacts" with players "to an intensively organized, sometimes subtle, system that may utilize numbers of agents on and off the campus." In the former group, two of the lily whites, Chicago and Cornell, are named, as are Colorado and Washington State. In the latter and supposedly more venial group are named Michigan, Northwestern, Oglethorpe, Southern California and Wisconsin. In regard to Northwestern, it quotes President Walter Dill Scott as saying that he was not aware of recruiting being "officially" done, while Professor J. F. A. Pyre, of Wisconsin, protests that the charges of subsidizing "in full proce" are not "in my opinion justified by the facts." He finds, he says, no overt violation of the conference agreement.

The report thereupon becomes contradictory, since it lists Lehigh and Middlebury among the colleges that showed no evidence of recruiting, yet later failed to include them with the immaculates. Whereas Chicago and Cornell were linked with Amherst, Colorado, Oberlin and Vanderbilt as accected by the "occasional acts of single individuals with athletic or administrative connections." Yet the first named pair were placed in the wholly approved group.

The committee claims to have discovered that these institutions maintained a recruiting correspondence, either on a small or a large scale: Alabama, California, Denver, Drake, Michigan, Montana State, New York University, Ohio Wesleyan, Oregon Aggies, Pennsylvania, Southern California, Rutgers, Vermont, Washington, W. and J. Washington State and Wisconsin.

It was mentioned that while the correspondence at Alabama seemed to be "unnecessarily voluminous, it was written with a care for standard English and a lack of pressure that was commendable." Montana State, N. Y. U., Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, the report said, it was necessary to appoint a member of the athletic staff to take care of the correspondence, so great was the amount of schoolboy mail alleged to have been received and answered.

Subsequently, the report again becomes inconsistent, in that having failed to approve thoroughly of Stanford, it lists the cardinal with Bates, Bowdoin, Brigham Young, Chicago, Cornell, Lehigh, Tulane, and Virginia as offering a good education as "the only inducement" to athletes who show an inclination to matriculate. However, Brown, Columbia, Oglethorpe and Wisconsin seem to be accused of sending out agents to establish contacts with athletes while Oregon Aggies, Pennsylvania, and southern California are charged with bringing athletes to the campus for the propagation of "pleasant personal relationships."

Amherst, Arizona, Drake, Michigan, Northwestern, Oregon Aggies, Purdue and Southern California, it is inferred, have alumni secretaries who have connections of "varying intensity with the alumna on one hand and the athletic organization on the other." In addition to these, it is said that the alumni secretaries at Georgia Tech, Vermont and W. and J., have become involved in recruiting "by correspondence or in person." The assistant secretary of Oberlin, the assistant to the president of Gettysburg and the business manager of Drake are mentioned having corresponded with athletes. Dartmouth, it seems, has an unpaid alumnus that looks after this work, thus giving it an unofficial tinge. Brown and Purdue, the report adds, have paid agents.

The coaches at Bucknell, Colgate, Columbia, Georgia, Georgia Tech, N. Y. U., Oglethorpe, Tennessee, W. and J., and Western Maryland are "expected or permitted" to devote much of their time to recruiting, it is added, and that "evidence adduced" indicated that Michigan, Ohio State, Purdue, Southern California and Wisconsin went in "for a systematic approach to schoolboy athletes."

The report names Indiana as having an alumnus who hired a special car to transport prospective athlete-students to the university.

Occasionally, it softens its recriminations—as in referring to Princeton and Stanford as taking a genuine personal interest in their athletes, aside from their ability and in mentioning Amherst, Princeton and Tennessee as having athletic authorities, who in three instances were opposed to some recruiting that was alleged to have been under way.

But, mostly, the indictment runs on, ad infinitum, in a coldly critical vein—jabbing here with a spiteful lance, pricking the skin there with the fine point of alleged findings.

All too few escape its venom. All too many are frankly charged with malefactions of one kind or another. For the former, there is the cloak of virtue. For the latter, there still is the chance of vindication.

The committee has dealt in what it declared to be facts. If this be true, there is only one course opened to the accused. They must fight facts with facts, granting that they have such things at their disposal.

As Ohio Woman Milks "Bossie"

Mrs. Irving Bastian Milks Cow in Park Avenue

A $15,000 cow standing in the middle of Park Avenue at Thirty-sixth Street, was milked by an Ohio farmer's wife.

Neither the cow nor the farmer's wife, Mrs. Irving Bastian, of Clyde, Ohio, seemed to think the affair was any great shakes. But to the several hundred New Yorkers gathered around, who had an idea milk came in cans, it was an interesting exhibition of the ways of nature.

The cow's name is Successor Sultane. The blue blood of the Isle of Jersey courses in her veins. She arrived in the metropolis from Mt. Kisco by truck.

She wore around her neck what is believed to be the oldest cowbell in Ohio, brought to New York especially by Mrs. Bastian for the Fall dinner of the Ohio Society at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Once or twice, as Successor turned her placid eyes toward the gaping throng, she emitted a mild and pleasant moo. When no one returned her greeting, she bent her head and tried out the stubby grass of the Park Avenue mall.

She even consented once to moo for the talking newsreel boys.

Mrs. Bastian did not wear what is popularly supposed to be the correct milking costume. She had on a blue ensemble. All she did was remove her coat and gloves, sit on an overturned pail and start to work.

all right, and I am awaiting more information," Murphy said.

Lawrence Richey, presidential secretary, said at the White House all he knew was what Murphy told him. He said:

"Murphy told me it looked merely like a pair of cranks who tried to do something they couldn't do and that it didn't amount to anything. Murphy is going to tell me the facts when he receives them from New Albany."

Mr. Hoover is enroute back to the capital from his first long journey from the White House since his inaugural.

He left Sunday to be at Dearborn, Mich., to attend the goldea jubilee of the invention of the incandescent light by Thomas A. Edison, elaborately staged by Henry Ford.

Then he attended the celebration of the opening of the Ohio River by riding a side-wheeler steamer down the river from Cincinnati to Louisville.

After addressing the river folk at Louisville last night he boarded a special train for a speedy trip to Washington.

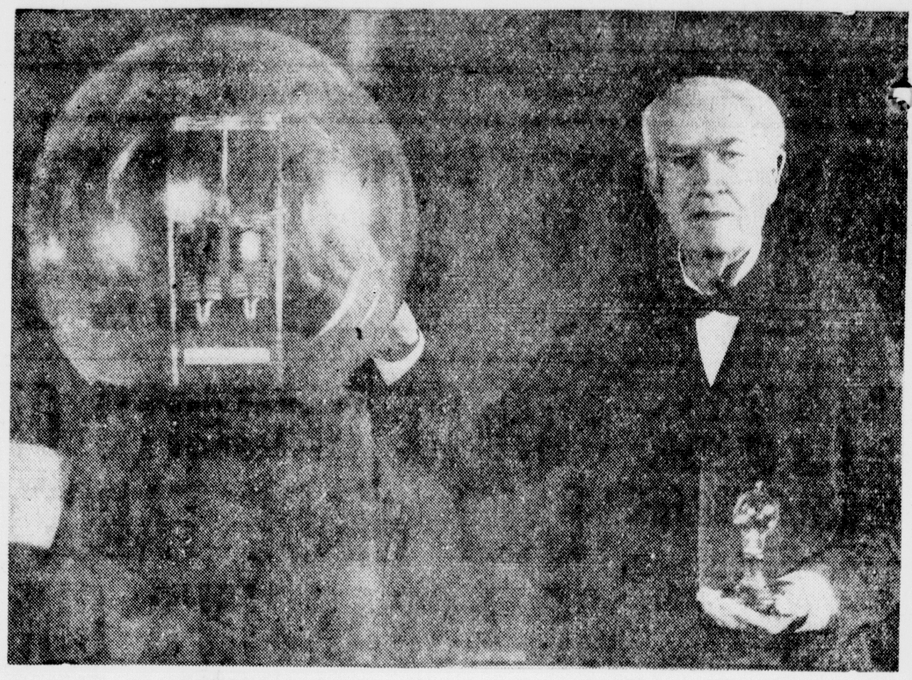
The attempt to wreck his train at New Albany and probably kill or injure him is the second made upon him since he took over the presidency.

Several months ago a woman from Frederick, Md., visited the ante-room to his White House office and tried in vain to see him.

Secret service operatives noted she acted queer and humored her, permitting her to remain in the room under the surveillance and telling her "they were doing their best to get the president to see her."

As the hours passed she left.

Two days later this same woman pulled out a pistol in the Frederick court and leveled it at the judge. A sheriff stayed her before she could shoot.



Thomas A. Edison, whose first successful incandescent lamp gave 16 candlepower of illumination, contrasts that attempt with the lamp achievement of the day, a 50,000 watt lamp capable of 150,000 candlepower.

Three new members were welcomed to the union, who were Mrs. Lawrence Mitchner, Mrs. Humphrey and Mrs. Kilmer.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Louise LeMar and will be an all-day meeting. Plans are being made to invite the Clinton County president, Mrs. W. R. Lewis, to this meeting.

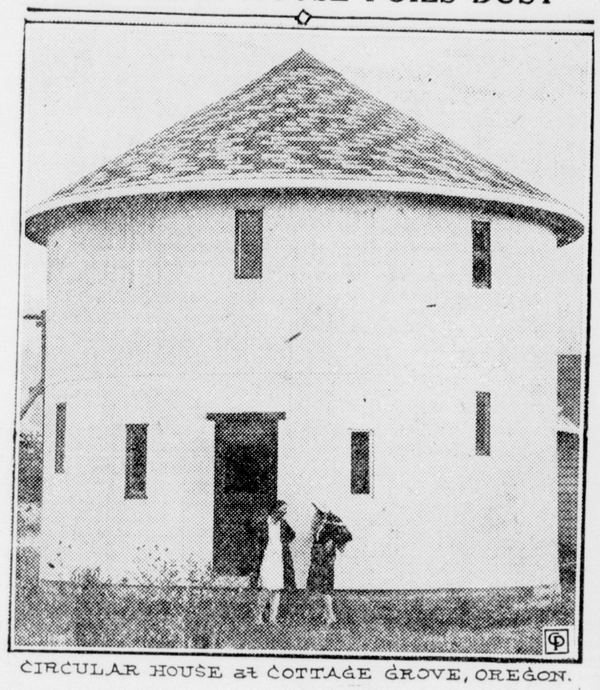
CIRCULAR HOUSE FOILS DUST



CIRCULAR HOUSE at COTTAGE GROVE, OREGON.

Central Press

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. ..—The happy housewife of a unique residence recently completed at Cottage Grove will never be troubled with dust in the corners of her rooms. Joe Landess, who designed it and did all the work on it except for the assistance of another carpenter for three days, is authority for this statement.

Landess believes the circular house is ideal because it has fewer dust traps, more room space for the cost of construction, and better lighting. Windows are few and small, but the reflection of light from every direction because of the circular walls, makes the house as light as the average domicile, he points out.

Clamps Hold it Together

The lumber runs vertically, which is opposite from the way a house is ordinarily built. The up and down pieces are two inches thick and grooved into each other. There are no joists used, and the wood strips are held in position by clamps which encircle the entire upright portion. The clamps are reinforced inside.

Some difficulty was experienced in getting all the upright pieces in position at once, but after the clamps had been applied, the barrel was so solid that it could have been blown over without being damaged.

Floor Hung From Rods

The lower floor is one large living room. There are no supports in it for the floor above, which is hung from iron rods secured in the apex of the roof. There are three rooms in the upper floor.

A unique feature of this unusual house is a ventilator in the apex of the roof. A protion of the roof is raised and lowered with little effort by a cable. The movable portion of the roof is attached to an iron pipe that has been sunk into a timber extending from the roof to the ceiling of the second floor. Each room is so arranged that air within may go out through the ventilator.

HARVEST CANTATA TO BE PRESENTED BY TRINITY CHOIR

"A Song of Thanksgiving" by Maunder, a harvest cantata, will be presented by members of the choir of Trinity M. E. Church at the church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock at which time the union services will be held.

Soloists of the evening will be Mrs. Wilbur Shultz, Mrs. Foy Cotfelt, Mr. Leigh Bickett and Mr. W. C. Boyce. Miss Juanita Rankin will be at the organ and Miss Marjorie Street at the piano. Mrs. W. H. McGervey is the director.

BELIEVE SELLING WAVE HAS PASSED

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Though the movement of industrial stocks in the early trading was extremely irregular and confusing, it was evident that the leading industrial stocks, including the steels, coppers, oils and electrical manufacturing were meeting with strong support, and that the wave of hysterical selling had subsided, for the time being at least.

Public utility stocks and motors were still under fire. National Power and Light dropped ten points to thirty-two and one-half; American Waterworks five points and United Corporation nearly two points. New low prices for the year were recorded in this period for General Motors, Packard, Riggs Manufacturing and Electric Autolite, all of which had exhibited extreme weakness in yesterday's hectic session.

The bankers and bullish interests, in a desperate effort to stave off a panic, bought stocks by the 10,000 and 20,000-share blocks, representing accumulated nationwide selling orders placed before the opening gong sounded. Stock sales in the first half hour totaled 1,676,300 shares, a 300 per cent increase over the same period yesterday.

WINTER HITS OHIO; RELIEF IS COMING

Mr. and Mrs. Ohio and all of the little Ohioans began buttoning up their overcoats today as winter weather still held the state in its somewhat icy grip.

Relief is promised tomorrow, however. The official forecast, which was issued at Columbus, declared that the weather tomorrow would be fair with slowly rising temperatures.

The thermometer may ascend to the 50 degree point then, it was stated.

Meanwhile, another freezing temperature warning was issued for tonight.

Snow flurries were experienced in various parts of the state. In New Lexington, the grade schools were closed because the sudden cold snap found the schools' heating systems unfinished.

Northern Ohio suffered the brunt of the weather yesterday. Gales swept Lake Erie and stiff winds and slanting rain and sleet storms lashed that section.

CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

MASKED PARADE TO BE FEATURE OF HALLOWE 'EN FROLIC HERE

Plans for the community Hallowe'en celebration to be held in Xenia under auspices of the Xenia Retail Merchant's Association Thursday night, October 31 are nearing completion, it is announced.

The outstanding feature of the evening of revelry will be a costume parade in which all masqueraders are invited to participate. The procession will begin its march through the business section of the city promptly at 8 p. m. and the parade will be augmented by three bands, including the noted O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band, the Bath Twp. High School band and the Osborn band.

The marchers will disband in front of the Court House on the south side where E. Main St. between Detroit and Green Sts., will be roped off. The celebration will be continued there.

A platform will be erected on the Court House lawn or sidewalk and a variety of novelty entertainment will be provided.

Announcement is made that fifty cash and merchandise prizes aggregating nearly $200 will be awarded by Xenia business men to those revelers whose costumes are most diversified. First prize of $5 in gold will be awarded to the best costumed woman and a $5 box of cigars is first prize for the best costumed man. The other prizes are for the best of a wide variety of costumes.

The entertainment which will climax the celebration will include a hog calling contest and a number of other features.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOD ACKNOWLEDGES HIS OWN — And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son: in Thee I am well pleased.—Luke 3:22.

THEY WANT THEIR OWN MAN

Very significant is the motion introduced in the Orange Free State nationalist congress asserting that the next governor-general of South Africa should be a South African rather than an Englishman. It is apparent that the Dutch, the numerically predominant section of the population, have not eased up in their struggle for political power, a struggle which has been raging since the Boer war nearly 30 years ago.

South Africa is frequently referred to as "the flower of British democratic development," in that its voters, limited to those of European descent, have wide self-governing powers. The governor-general, appointed by the king and the personal representative of the king, has little executive power. The office serves mainly to bolster u British monarchical traditions, and to this policy is attributed in some degree the continued loyalty of the dominion to the mother country.

There, nevertheless, has been an undercurrent of feeling in all the dominions that the appointment of an Englishman to this spectacular office is unnecessary. At each stage of their progress they have felt the urge for local government and less domination from Downing Street. That this feeling is strong in South Africa is understandable. There always has been a tendency in the South African government to subordinate other considerations to the welfare of the diamond and gold industries, two enterprises which, while they have reaped great profits for the financiers in London, have never done much for the native population. The agricultural interests have struggled along without much assistance until recent years.

The Earl of Athlone is the present governor-general of South Africa and has proved generally popular. But the fact that such a resolution should be entertained by a national party congress is distinct evidence that the South Africans are determined to rule South Africa themselves.

The Ohio dance hall proprietor who has barred women without stockings and men without ties, knows that men would'nt go sockless anyhow and probably feels he must keep up a pretense of impartiality.

Now that a person can get almost anywhere in a little while, somebody ought to invent something to do after arriving that will be more interesting than turning around to go back again.

Those who insist that home should be more than a parking place, seem to be losing sight of the fact that often it isn't even that.

Representative James has the correct idea regarding the way to treat bothersome lobbyists. He kicks them out.

Even if a woman does enter the senate, it is a toss up whether she will be able to get in a word edgewise.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Old Doc Ziegfeld has a Chinese puzzle on his hands. He's made up his mind to make "Ming Toy," the musical version of "East Is West," his first production of the season and he's all ready to go ahead except for the fact that he has no score and no leading lady. The score doesn't bother so much. It's the prima senorita difficulty that's adding additional lines of care to his already Socratic phiz. He'd like to turn the part over to Marilyn Miller, but the thought of hiding her golden locks under a slick black wig and shafts beneath the silken pantaloons of a Chinese lady sickens him.

A STORY OF THE THEATER

The night "The Wizard of Oz" began its long and memorable engagement something like twenty-five years ago, there bounced out on the stage of the Majestic (now the Cosmopolitan) theater a tiny slip of a young woman looking exactly like a short-skirted doll. She played the role of Dorothy Gale and when she sang and danced she literally and actually "stopped the show." Her name was Anna Laughlin and for a decade thereafter she was an important figure in many musical pieces. Then she retired from the stage.

She came back last week at the Music Box but she was not visible to the audiences that nightly crowd that playhouse to see "The Little Show." She was behind the scenes giving aid, encouragement and motherly advice to a charming daughter who was making her first appearance on Broadway in an important leading role.

The daughter's name is Lucy Monroe, who for four years has been taking the initial steps that some day will lead to stardom. Before her Music Box appearance she understudied the prima donna in Fred Stone's "Criss Cross"—the same Fred Stone who appeared with her Maw as the scarecrow with the squeaky voice in the "Wizard of Oz" a quarter of a century ago.

A REVOLT AGAINST FASHION

Fanny Hurst has a fierce mad on the Fashion Barons. She's sore clean through from the bone in the upper left hand corner of her head down to the gambrel joint at the wardrobe they're asking her to don this fall.

"It' a mental yank-down, that's what it is,' fumes Fanneh. "In the last seven years we've shorn our polls, released our legs from the thraldom of limbs, uncorseted our torsos and these things have had an effect on us in other ways. Now, industry, with a quirk of its hand reaches out and attempts to put us back. The leg is becoming nasty again, with its long silken coverings of skirts. It's no longer a means of locomotion. We're pulling in our waistlines, if any, and we're right back where we started from. Women mustn't compromise. If the dressmakers won't give 'em what they want, walk out on 'em!"

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

SUN POWER

How long can dirigibles stay up! Refueling flights give sensational demonstrations and teach us many things about flying. Now comes Goddard, head of the physics department of Clark university, and gives us a solar motor, harnessing the heat rays of the sun and converting heat into steam power. Dr. Goddard says his engine can be used to run machinery on the farm. And some day it may be adapted for airships. Little by little man will learn to capture and train for his own use the immeasurable resources of the universe. It is not too much to expect that men of the future may travel through the air by power derived from the sun.

AFRAID OF THE BIBLE

National Sunday School Union, of England, publishes a new version of the Bible. The axe of the censor falls upon its pages. The "Songs of Solomon" are cut out. Here is literature, as beautiful as any in the book. Authors of the new version are afraid to expose youth to part of the Bible while encouraging youth to read other parts.

Sometimes it seems as though the world grew sillier, less intelligent. So-called fundamentalists believe every word of the Bible, no matter what the cold facts of science may prove. Others believe part of the Bible and won't even let other people read what they wish to read and believe what they wish to believe. Others do not believe anything.

No man can tell you how much of the Bible to believe or how little That is something to discover for yourself. It is going back along the road toward the dark ages of the past for any organization to print a Bible and decide what is to be read and what is not to be read.

PROHIBITION AGAIN

Prohibition can not be made a success by legislation but must be justified "through public opinion founded on personal conviction." So says a preacher, making a speech. And he says about all there is to say, in a few words. We are not going to get far in any reform good or bad, without "personal conviction." The trouble with prohibition—and many other experiments—is that not enough people are convinced that they want it.

AS TO LOVE

Strange how people try to deal with love as they would with a matter of business or a matter of life's daily routine. One can no more argue with love than he can with hunger or sleep or any of the other primitive instincts that move and sway and largely control the human being. Love is or it is not. One is not argued into it or argued out of it.

Who's Who and Timely Views

INDIVIDUAL FEATURES SAID TO CHARACTERIZE EACH NATIONAL PARTY

By HORACE M. ALBRIGHT
Director of the National Park Service

(Horace Marden Albright was born at Bishop, Cal., Jan. 6, 1890. He is a graduate of the University of California and Georgetown university. From 1914 to 1917 he was clerk to the secretary of the interior. In 1917 he was assistant attorney, department of the interior, and assigned to the national park affairs. He has been superintendent of Yellowstone National park since 1919. He is now director of the National Park service.)

In creating national parks special attention must always be paid to the policy of the service that each site contains some natural feature so extraordinary or unique as to be of national interest and importance.

Each national park in the United States is different from the other and each has a marked personality of its own.

Mt. Ranier, in Washington, for example, is an extinct volcano, down the sides of which flow 28 glaciers, or rivers of ice.

The Yosemite National park, in California, in addition to its celebrated Yosemite valley and lofty waterfalls, has in the north a river called the Tuolumne which spouts wheels of water 20 feet and more into the air.

The Sequoia National park, also in California, contains great numbers of sequoia trees, of which scores are from 20 to 30 feet in diameter and some even larger, while thousands are over ten feet.

The Glacier National park, in Montana, has cliffs several thousand feet deep, and more than 60 glaciers feed hundreds of lakes. One lake floats icebergs all summer.

The Yellowstone National park, in Wyoming, besides its geysers, has many hot springs which build glistening plateaus of highly colored mineral deposits.

The Rocky Mountain National park, in Colorado, straddles the Continental Divide at a lofty height, with snow-capped mountains extending from end to end.

The Mesa Verde National park, in Colorado, hides in its deep-cut canyons the well-preserved ruins of a civilization which passed out of existence so many centuries ago that not even tradition recalls its people.

The Mount McKinley National park, in Alaska, incloses a mountain higher above the near observer than any other mountain in the world.

The Hawaii National park, Hawaiian Islands, besides its three volcanic peaks, possesses, the greater part of time, a lake of boiling lava which may be photographed at night by its own light.

The Grand Canyon National park, in Arizona, exhibits the mightiest chasm by far in the world.

The Acadia National park, in Maine, formerly called the Lafayette, exhibits some of the oldest granite mountains in America.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

No matter what you desire in the way of avoirdupois, you can reduce or gain according to your wish at Mont-Dore, Karlsbad or Baden. The diets prescribed are simple, and could be carried out by any woman in her own home if she wished—but it is most likely true that the guests or patients at the watering places would never stick to the routine of the diet unless they were forced to it.

Breakfast is taken in the privacy of the boudoir—only not by the mildest stretch of imagination could the sleeping rooms of one of these Kur-Hauser's be called a boudoir. It consists of a plain white bed, a small table beside the bed, a chair and a dresser. They are stiff white ruffly curtains at the windows. The simplicity is more than made up for, however, by the floods of sunlight pouring through the window.

Usually, the night nurse or dienstmaedchen (maid servant) leaves a glass of milk or some stewed fruit which the guest takes immediately on rising. When the doctor does his examination for the first day he prescribes the diet which the person should have and designates it by number. Thereafter all the food served comes from the kitchen tagged with this number. Dinner is truly an amusing sight when fat and lean gather in strictly formal clothes—and everyone eats the food which has been set on the table. Each plate is decorated with its proper tag number. Never did the hostess of a novelty dinner devise such decorations!

Reducing diet consists of decaffeinized coffee, a boiled egg and a broetchin (a tiny roll) for breakfast; for lunch, a fish course and meat course (sometimes meat is substituted for the fish), plenty of lettuce with plain vinegar dressing, tea without sugar, and stewed fruit. Dinner is practically like lunch, with the addition of an assortment of cheese.

The gaining diet includes many rich, starchy puddings—rich cakes and chicken soups. Many a dieting individual looses courage on seeing the spread set before her neighbor who must put on weight.

No matter whether the Kur is enjoyed or not, it is generally successful, for it not unusual for the patient to gain or lose 10 to 15 pounds, depending on their desire. As is obviously seen, there is nothing in these diets which you could not plan for yourself, the rules to follow being simple. Eliminate starchy, sugary foods for reducing, and add them for gaining. A good scale is the only other requisite.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Uncle Sam's war-built merchant fleet was mostly carelessly thrown together from poor material at exorbitant prices.

No wonder he could not get all his money back when he began to advertise these ships for sale. Still, it does seem as if he might have done better than to put up cold cash to persuade private concerns to take vessels off his hands. It would have been cheaper to sink them than to get rid of them by one typical method which Comptroller General J. R. McCarl tells us about.

This was a bargain by which the government was to receive $325,000 for a line of boats it was anxious to unload.

However, it agreed to recondition them first, at a cost of half the $325,000—"more than half," according to McCarl, but he does not say just how much more, so call it an even $162,500. Besides, out of the $325,000, the government actually got only $28,674—the balance being pure hot air.

Net loss to Uncle Sam thus, $133-826—or considerably more than he would have had to pay a man to bore holes in the boats' hulls.

True, a $325,000 sale of ships does look better in an official report, for the public's benefit, than an account of the scuttling of the vessels to get them out of the way—more like Coolidge economy; decidedly so.

As for the $296,326 hot air item, and the item of the $133,826 loss—it was easy enough not to overemphasize them.

Indeed, they were not over-emphasized. Neither was a 10-year mail contract to the ships' purchasers—a contract for between $350,000 and $450,000 annually—or enough, as McCarl remarks, to "more than provide for the cost of the line" in a year.

Such details were rather "played down" and might have escaped outsiders' attention altogether if McCarl had not felt the urge to pry into the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet corporation's books.

It was in connection with the report he made, following this feat of expert accountancy on his part, that McCarl mentioned the sale by the Emergency Fleet corporation of 321 ships, which it cost Uncle Sam $408,062,898 to build—

For $43,962,308—on paper—

Of which, however, Uncle Sam got only $15,413,919 in cash—

Whereas, there remains outstanding an indebtedness due to Uncle Samuel of $55,326,005, inclusive of the sums still owing to him for various accessories, in addition to the 321 ships—

An indebtedness which would not be so bad if it were not for the fact that the Fleet corporation refers to $31,562,174 of it as "undoubtful or uncollectable."

That is, as McCarl pessimistically observes, 60 per cent of it is no good.

The comptroller general adds that the corporation appears to have dealt with many irresponsible firms—but after the figures quoted, it seems superfluous to rub it in like that.

"It is my understanding," says the statement issued by President Hoover, in ordering a justice department investigation, following the McCarl report, "that there is no charge of misfeasance."

And curiously enough, not only is there little suspicion of "misfeasance" among Emergency Fleet corporation officials, but few folks who have watched the fleet's vicissitudes in the last few years are inclined to accuse them of much, if any, mismanagement that they could have helped.

No policy of the Coolidge administration was more relentlessly pursued than the policy of ridding the government of its merchant marine—at whatever cost.

Officials held responsible for this policy's fulfillment sold ships for what they could get—or quit.

The turnover in presidents of the Emergency Fleet corporation was mighty rapid during the Coolidge regime—it was hardly in human nature for a shipping executive not to balk sooner or later, at one bargain counter transaction or another that he was required to indorse.

Farly, Palmer, Crowley, Dalton—a name had scarcely time to appear on the corporations office door before a fresh one took its place.

It was not ships alone.

Twenty-one electric fans sold for $5.10 the lot. An engine which cost $105,000 sold for $2,500. A debt of $100,000 cancelled for $16,000.

McCarl lists items like these into the millions.

It got the government out of the shipping business, anyway.

BREAKFAST
Chilled Cantaloupe or Halved Grape Fruits
Uncooked Wheat Cereal with Cream
Bacon Whole Wheat Muffins Coffee
LUNCHEON
Pear Salad with Toasted Whole Wheat Muffins
Corn Fritters with Syrup Milk
DINNER
Baked Tomato with Egg
Baked Potatoes

In this menu, planned for two people, I suggest splitting and toasting the breakfast muffins for luncheon. Meat is omitted for the day, the egg and tomato dish replacing it in the dinner menu.

Baked Tomato With Egg—Select one large tomato for each member of the family. Wash and remove the stem end, but do not peel. With a teaspoon, carefully hole out a cavity large enough to hold an egg. Sprinkle the inside of the tomato with salt. Into each drop a small piece of butter and an egg. Salt and pepper the egg and top with grated cheese. Place in a flat casserole and between the tomatoes scatter the pieces removed from the centers. Set these. Bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees. If you desire the egg yolk, hard bake five or ten minutes longer.

FOR THANKSGIVING DINNER

PUMPKIN CUSTARD PIE
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Peel and cube pumpkin to fill three cups. Stem or boil in a pint of water containing one-half teaspoon salt, from twenty-five to forty minutes, or until tender. Drain mash and strain. Or use canned pumpkin. Custard: One-fourth teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups strained pumpkin, one teaspoon cinnamon, one and one-half cups milk, two-thirds cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon ginger, two eggs, one-half cup cream. Mix the pumpkin with the brown sugar and simmer gently for twenty minutes. Pumpkin so prepared makes a richer pie filling. Before taking from the fire add the spice and salt. Cool. Then beat the eggs well into the pumpkin mixture, adding the milk and cream lastly. Line individual tins with pastry and brush the bottoms of each with the white of egg to prevent a soggy crust before pouring in the pumpkin mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes or until the custard is firm in the center when tried with a thin-bladed knife. Naturally this pie may be made in the daytime and served cold.

Diet and Health

Is Yellow Milk Better Than White?

"Most people think that yellow milk is better than the white. The butter-fat test does not always say so. Does yellow milk have more vitamins? J."

It would, if it had more cream, J., for the vitamin that is highest in milk is vitamin A, the growth and disease-resisting vitamin, and most of this vitamin is in the cream.

The butter-fat from Guernsey and Jersey cows is naturally highly colored and there is a greater proportion of it, so the milk would be more highly colored. (The milk from the Holstein cows is comparatively white.) Judging from this, the naturally deeper colored milk would be richer in vitamin A.

When cows are on fresh pasture in summer, the milk is deeper in color and richer in vitamins than when they are on dry feed during the winter, not only because the cow is getting more vitamins in its fodder, but because it is exposed to sunlight.

It has been observed that for some unknown reason the yellow coloring matter in foods is often (not always) an indication of the richness of vitamin A. For instance, yellow sweet corn contains more than the white; carrots contain more than parsnips; sweet potatoes more than white. I will add that not infrequently the richer milks of the Jersey and Guernsey cows won't agree with some babies on account of the extra fat, where that of the less rich milk of the Holsteins will. It is usually considered best, however, to give babies milk from the mixed herds.

Remember that unless the mil is certified, it must be either pas tuerized or boiled.

Pica

"Five years ago an intense long ing for starch came over me, and used to take one-half pound box week, but now it takes almost tha much a day to satisfy the craving The craving is worse right afte meals, not matter how nourishing a meal I have, and if I don't ea at least one-third of a half-pound box, I am hungry again within half-hour after eating. Is this habi injurious? What effect will it have on me, and what can I do to break myself of the habit? MRS. S."

You are suffering from a form o the disorder known as Pica, Mrs. S that is, an appetite for inedible substances such as dirt, slate, chalk etc. Not frequently, pica indicates a mineral deficiency (but the substances chosen to nibble on does not necessarily furnish that lack).

According to your figures, you are getting about three ounces of raw starch twice a day. An ounce of dry starch is 120 calories, so you are getting around 700 C. a day and if it is in excess of your needs that would make you gain over 60 pounds in a year! besides most decidedly unbalancing your diet. Pure starch is solely an energy food, supplying no vitamins, mineral elements, nor protein (building and repair food) and when you take energy food in excess, even though you are taking considerable of the needed elements, it makes them relatively insufficient.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

GREY EYES: Yours is the old question of what to do when your parents won't let you go with boys. As you are 19 you are certainly old enough to have boy friends and to be allowed to go out as long as you don't injure your health. I don't know what parents expect of young people like you.

But what can I say? If you "slip out" and go and they find it out they will be harder on you than ever, and besides, I hate the deception and sneakiness of that kind of thing. Going joy riding with boys you know well and whom you can trust, is perfectly all right, but parents have come to have a horror of such pleasures from hearing of things that sometimes happen to girls. Your parents can't deny you the natural recreations of your age for much longer, Grey Eyes, so I can only advise you to be as patient as possible until they come to their senses.

"DEAREST VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl in my teens and in love with a boy two years my senior. We went together about six months, and during this time we promised each other not to go with anyone else. I didn't keep my promise, although I think he did. When he found out how I had been going with other boys he quit coming. Now he is going with another girl. Tell me how I can win him back.

"HEARTBROKEN BABY."

I don't imagine you can. You deceived him and broke his faith in you and he's probably, very sensibly, decided that a girl who would not keep such a promise is not the girl for him.

BLUE EYED BET: There is no harm in going with boys if your parents approve, Bet, and unless you are foolish and cheap in your actions when with them I cannot see why the girls' mother would condemn you.

Possibly the mothers do not approve of a girl of your age going with boys and they are afraid you will make their daughters dissatisfied if they are chummy with you. Why not let the boys go for awhile and cultivate the girls and try to get to know the mothers and prove that you are a good pal for their daughters?

As to the boy friend, I think it would be much wiser to let him go, as he seems disinclined to go to your home and is jealous. You do not want a loafer who hangs around corners for a friend.

BROKEN HEARTED NAN: A girl of 19 is old enough to go out without a member of the family tagging along. However, it is much better to have a big brother's escort to a dance than to go with other girls. Your family probably feels that that does not look well and will not get you the best reputation.

Why not accept your father's or brother's escort until you get a boy friend, be glad you have some one to look out for you, and get as much out of their companionship as you can. Brothers don't usually want to bother with sisters.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 1 years old and full of pep. I bun with a bunch that is peppy, too None of them are fresh and non like to pet, but they do like t smoke, drink, dance and have good time.

"One of my girl friends is old fashioned and wants me to quit go ing with this gang. I like her very much and I like to go with th gang and have a good time. Wha should I do? PEPPY."

I don't see why you can't dance and have a peppy time and stil cut out the drinking and smoking Peppy. That sort of thing is bad for anyone and you'll probably re gret it later. Try out the gir friend's program for awhile and se if you don't get as much kick ou of it as you do in running with th faster bunch.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I would like your advice. I am a girl of 17 and go with a boy 16. We have been friends for about four years. He says he loves me and I am sure I love him, but he won't come to see me. I have asked him to, telling him my parents don't care. He won't come and won't tell me the reason why. LOVING MAE."

I presume he's shy of meeting the family, Mae. He may get over it in a year or so, so don't let i worry you.

JUST BROWN EYES: It is th boy's place to come to see you o write you, Brown Eyes. He know where you live, doesn't he? Don' worry about meeting him, and probably fate will bring you to gether.

ANXIOUS PEGGY: I think I'd start going with other boys right away, Peggy, and would not take the boy friend back when he comes this time. Why be a doormat to him, even if you do love him?

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE LIGHT WORSHIPPERS.

Peter was relieved to find the moths growing more friendly. Soon it was evident they had forgiven him and forgotten the sad fate that had befallen some of their less lucky brothers. Suddenly the old general made a remark that surprised Peter, whose memory was longer.

"I am rather sorry now that those boys didn't catch me. Then they would have had something to be proud of! By the way, I think I see a pool over yonder. I must see if my wings are tilted as they should be," and off flew the vain fellow to admire himself in the water which the moon lighted up like a mirror. The other moths flew after him, delighted at a chance to view their own beauty.

Moon-moth was the only one of them all who didn't dash off to the pool mirror.

"Pooh," said he to Peter, "I'd much rather be drinking honey or playing tag with the fireflies than gazing at myself in the water. I am good looking and I know it and that satisfies me. I don't have to be staring at myself every little while, that's one thing sure. But look! Yonder is a light! See how beautiful it is. Come, brothers come. Leave that pool and le us go to the light. It is calling us."

"Where is it, Moon-moth?" cried the nightflyers, eagerly. "Tell us quickly, so we may go and warm ourselves in its rays."

"Just over beyond that clump of trees," replied Moon-moth. "I saw it first, and so I will lead you to it." Off he started, flying so quickly that Peter had all that he could do to cling fast to his seat.

The others quickened their pace too, and Peter sailed on surrounded on all sides by the flyers of the night, who, as they flew, chanted this pretty song:

"Light, light, beautiful light,
Shining to guide us in our flight
Happy and care free
We fly to worship thee
Warm us and welcome
The flyers of night."

War has been declared by Ohio State University officials on stunt flying over the Ohio stadium during football games.

Two weeks ago at the Ohio State-Iowa game one flyer was "grounded" as a result of his antics and in order to prevent a repetition of the incident university authorities expect to co-operate with federal officials.

A watch will be kept during the State-Indiana game at Columbus Saturday for aviators who seemingly disregard safety precautions by stunting or hovering over the stadium. University officials have been promised the co-operation of John M. Vorys, state director of aeronautics, in the effort to safeguard football crowds from reckless flying.

Vorys personally reported one offending flyer to the U. S. department of commerce while in Washington this week, following complaints made about reckless flying over the stadium during the State-Iowa game two weeks ago. His report was backed by affidavits.

A local ordinance to incorporate the federal air traffic laws so that Columbus government officials can help enforce the code is also being drafted by Vorys and city officials. Flying of aircraft at low altitudes over the stadium during games is also prohibited by university regulations.

When the Buckeyes and Hoosiers meet at Columbus Saturday in the Ohio stadium, Coaches Sam Willaman, of Ohio State, and Pat Page, of Indiana, through their respective squads, will have their first battle of wits in the Big Ten.

The game will mark the first time a football team coached by Pat Page has shown its wares in the Ohio stadium, and it will be the first time in five years Indiana has appeared at Columbus. The last time was in 1924 when, with the score 12 to 7 against them, the Buckeyes marched the length of the field only to fail to make a touchdown on the fourth down a yard from the goal line as the game ended.

Although State is made the favorite for the first time this season in a Big Ten game by the pre-game "dope," the squad is not over-confidant and is not discounting the ability of Indiana, which already has lost to Notre Dame, Chicago and Colgate.

One of baseball's most colorful pitchers—Joe McGinnity, known as the "Iron Man" of the National League a quarter century ago, is near death at his home in Brooklyn, having failed to rally after an operation August 27 for removal of a tumor. Since then a second tumor has developed and another operation was deemed inadvisable by attending surgeons in view of the old pitcher's weakened condition. There is virtually no hope for his recovery. McGinnity is 58 years of age and his baseball career spanned thirty-two years.

Because of the cadet schedule which terminates in mid-year examinations, there is little liklihood of a football game between the United States Military and Naval Academies, better known as the Army and Navy, this fall, it is disclosed by the war department. Regardless of the outcome of negotitions which have been in progress, the gridiron classic cannot resume this year because examinations at the military academy are between the Notre Dame game, November 30, and December 18, when the team will leave to play Stanford December 28.

BANKER IS DEAD

BUCCANEERS ENJOY LIGHT PRACTICES; SHAKE-UP EXPECTED

Blue And White Has Never Bowed To Burg Eleven

Xenia Central High School gridders are hoping for a long-deferred brace in their football fortunes in the second Miami Valley League game of the season with Miamisburg High School Saturday afternoon. The game will be staged at Harmon Field in Miamisburg and will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Rainy weather has interfered to a great extent with practice of the squad this week. Because of continuous rain no workouts were held Monday or Tuesday afternoons. Wednesday the players had an indoor practice session, held in the school gymnasium.

In their stocking feet, the Buccaneer footballers were put through formations although there was no scrimmage. The team is seeking to perfect new plays given it by Coach Wilson in an effort to obtain a more diversified offense.

It is also probable that radical changes may be made in the starting lineup for the Miamisburg game as frequent injuries to regulars have forced Coach Wilson to experiment with different combinations practically every game in an attempt to find eleven players who will work together most smoothly.

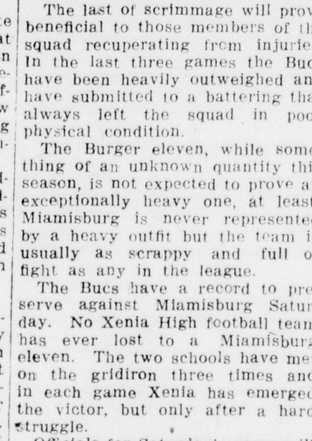
The last of scrimmage will prove beneficial to those members of the squad recuperating from injuries. In the last three games the Bucs have been heavily outweighed and have submitted to a battering that always left the squad in poor physical condition.

The Burger eleven, while something of an unknown quantity this season, is not expected to prove an exceptionally heavy one, at least. Miamisburg is never represented by a heavy outfit but the team is usually as scrappy and full of fight as any in the league.

The Bucs have a record to preserve against Miamisburg Saturday. No Xenia High football team has ever lost to a Miamisburg eleven. The two schools have met on the gridiron three times and in each game Xenia has emerged the victor, but only after a hard struggle.

Officials for Saturday's game will be: referee, Mattis, Otterbein College; umpire, Bishop, Ohio State; and Schenck, Dayton head linesman.

Personalities IN SPORT



HARRY HEILMAN, who has been sold to the Cincinnati Reds, served more than a decade with the Detroit Tigers. He came to Detroit from the Portland club in 1914, and after being sent to San Francisco on option, he returned to the Tigers in 1915. He played regularly ever since, with the exception of 1918, when he was in the navy, and has always been among the leading American League hitters.

Grace on the other end of the line used a similar larynx, although his voice is normal.

Western Reserve University is stepping into the big time football class this year, and has scheduled games with Carnegie Tech, Cornell, Ohio Wesleyan, Oberlin, Miami, and other strong teams Gorden Locke, Iowa All-American star, is the coach of the Red Cats. Next year's schedule will include even more big time college attractions in Cleveland. Home games are played at Dunn Field.

WILL CONTEST SUIT STARTED IN COURT

Jury trial of a suit contesting the validity of the will of the late Labron H. Atkinson, who died March 3, 1928, filed by heirs of the estate, opened in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning.

Plaintiffs in the action are John R. Atkinson, Mary M. Cooper and Clarence Folkerth, as guardian of Jessie and Elizabeth Folkerth, minors. The decedent is the father of John Atkinson and the grandfather of the other plaintiffs. All of the defendants are relatives of the deceased.

It is asserted that a paper purporting to be the last will, dated January 7, 1928 and admitted to probate March 26, 1928, is not the actual last will. For that reason the plaintiffs seek to have the document declared invalid.

PLAY IS PLEASING

A large audience saw the musical comedy, "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon," presented by a stock company at City Hall Theater Wednesday night, featuring the celebrated comic strip pair. The entertainment included twenty-five song hits, peppy music, pretty scenery and a chorus of prettier girls.

SCHOOLS ATTACKED IN CARNEGIE PROBE AMONG BEST KNOWN

Big Ten Director Defends Group; Claim Not Fair

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — The eighty-four colleges not approved in the Carnegie foundation report on college athletics are as follows:

Amherst, Boston College, Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, Holy Cross, Middlebury, Vermont, Springfield.

Allegheny, Bucknell, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Colgate, Columbia, Dickenson, Fordham, Franklin and Marshall, Geneva, Gettysburg, Grove City, Hobart, University of Pennsylvania, Lafayette, Lebanon Valley, Lehigh, Muhlenberg, New York University, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Rutgers, Syracuse, Ursinus, Washington and Jefferson.

Alabama, Centre, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Baylor, Oklahoma, Southern Methodist, University of Texas, Arizona, Brigham Young, Colorado, Denver, Idaho, Montana State, Utah, Wyoming.

California, Oregon State, Southern California, Stanford, University of Washington, Washington State, Hamilton, Susquehanna.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics in the Big Ten, today defended Western Conference schools in the face of the Carnegie report criticizing alleged subsidizing practices.

"I have not had an opportunity to read the report," the athletic commissioner stated, "but judging from excerpts I don't believe the Carnegie investigators have given a fair picture of conference conditions.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of. I think that I am better informed of Big Ten athletic conditions that any investigator for the Carnegie foundation. And I honestly believe that the Western Intercollegiate Conference universities are cleaner in regard to proselytiing and subsidizing athletics than are any other ten universities than can be named.

"Five years ago the Big Ten athletic leaders carefully defined recruiting and subsidizing and launched war on these outlawed tactics. When the Carnegie report relies upon the facts uncovered by an agent in a twenty-four hour visit to a university, it seems to me that it is evident that the report cannot be always fair to the institution."

Girl Author Expelled from School

Miss Carmen Dee Barnes, sixteen-year-old author of a book purporting to give an unvarnished version of the doings of girls in fashionable "finishing" schools. Mrs. George P. Inventor Launches New Model of Seadrome

E. R. Armstrong, inventor of the new seadrome, points to the miniature model recently launched at Cambridge, Md. If tests with this model prove that it will withstand the constant pounding of ocean waves, a giant seadrome will be constructed and stationed somewhere in the mid-Atlantic to act as a safety stop for trans-oceanic aeroplane flights. It is believed that the construction of such a seadrome, would greatly reduce the hazards of aviators enroute from Europe to America.

BRUNETTES MAY BE SELF-MADE

While our mothers spent their summers under parasols, shady hats and green veils, guarding their complexions from the effects of the sun, the healthy young woman of the past summer has exposed herself to the sun's rays until her skin is golden. The naturally fair woman finds it difficult to make her sun-tan disappear readily when winter comes, so she retains her brunette coloring by using a dark powder, says Lelong.

EDUCATION SYSTEM CHANGE IS SPEAKER

Mrs. Marietta Johnson, director of the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala., will address the student body of Antioch College at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening.

Mrs. Johnson has gained national recognition for her educational experimentation at Fairhope, and has also become known through a recent book describing her methods, "Youth in a World of Men." She has abolished the giving of marks, and grading systems such as are a feature of practically all school systems, and her work has been praised by progressive educators in many sections. It is expected that she will describe this in her address at Antioch.

Professor John Dewey, of Columbia University, following an investigation into the Fairhope methods, reported that in his judgment "the school has demonstrated that it is possible for children to lead the same natural lives in school that they lead in homes of the right sort outside of school; to progress bodily, mentally and morally in school without factitious pressure, rewards, examinations, grades, or promotions; while they acquire control of the conventional tools of learning and of the study of books."

Mrs. Johnson will also speak at the Antioch vesper service at 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Jack Kraft, above, former New York fencing master, was shot and his body thrown from a steamer into the Mississippi River, recovery of his body disclosed. Miss Ione Ord, New York, held by police, is said to have named the slayer, whose identity is being kept secret.

All members and troop committeemen of Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, are reminded by Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury to be on hand at the Scout cabin at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night for an important meeting that is expected to be featured by a troop inspection to be conducted by Homer T. Gratz, field executive of Tecumseh Council, assisted by S. N. McClellan, Xenia, Scout commissioner of Greene County. Attendance will be counted in the grading of each troop.

COTTAGES OWNED BY XENIANS ARE SAFE

Summer cottages owned by Xenians at Lakeside, O., near Toledo, are believed to have not been endangered by fire which swept the winter colony at the resort last Sunday, destroying twenty-seven unoccupied cottages and causing damage estimated at $100,000. Cottages belonging to H. S. LeSourd, W. Market St., and to the estate of the late Leila K. Harley were not situated in the area covered by the blaze, it is thought by the owners.

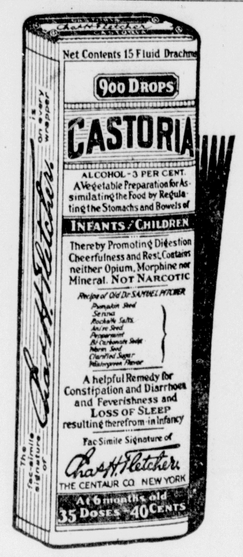
An Ailing CHILD



Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

Every fine car in America is an Eight. In fact, 41 per cent of all makes of cars today are Eights. Is it any wonder that thousands intending to buy new Sixes are hesitating?

Baby Recovers Hearing When "Grandad" Dies

Scoffers may jeer at miracles and direct answer to prayer, but the Pannone family of Brooklyn, N. Y., reverently exhibited their four-year-old son, Michael, as having been restored to health by a death-bed miracle.

The boy's eyesight is clearing, his power of speech has returned, and his hearing has been restored the family avers, as the result of a prayer by the boy's dying grandfather, Vincent.

Ten months ago, following the death of his mother, Michael was stricken with spinal meningitis, which cost him his sight, hearing and speech. Physicians declared the malady incurable--that he would never be anything but a mute cripple. On September 29 the boy's grandfather lay dying. He prayed devoutly to the "Blessed Virgin" to take away his own speech, sight and hearing and restore those of his grandson. Then he died.

Then, members of the family say, occurred the miracle. Within ten minutes of his grandfather's death the child recovered his voice. Within a short time his hearing was improved, while his vision which had been completely blurred, showed marked improvement.

Since that time the boy's physical progress has baffled the doctors.

HERE IS THE BATTLE OF THE HEMLINE PICTORIALLY TOLD

This array of fashion portraits tells the story of what has been happening during the past year to milady's skirts. The young lady at the extreme left wears a modish costume with the fashionable knee-length skirts of yesterday, then comes the below-the-knee hemline. Up to this time the scanty skirts have striven desperately to hold their own, but, as we continue to the right, they give up the struggle, steadily descending until at the very end of our pictorial story they sweep the floor.

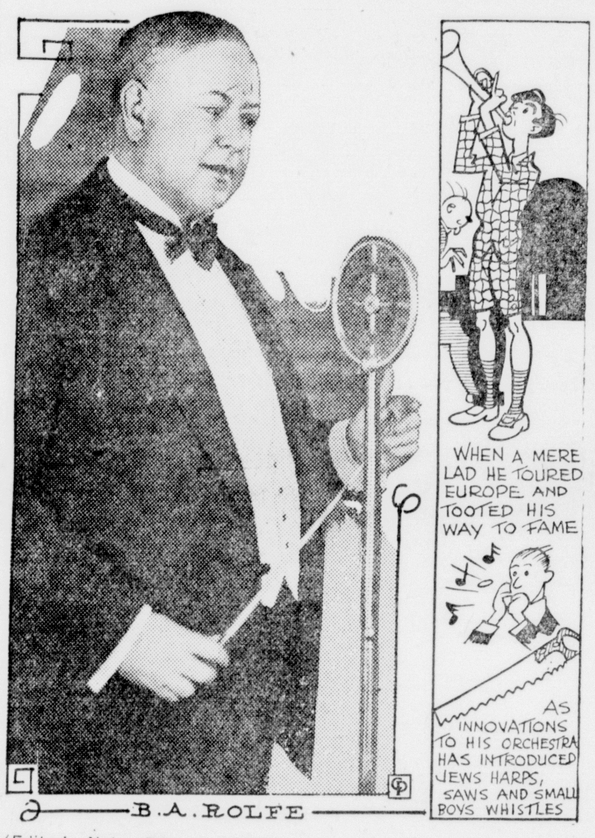
HERE'S FAMED MUSICIAN

Radio Leader Would Teach Boys Music To Stem Crime Wave



(Editor's Note: This is another of a series of sketches of the most prominent radio artists of the day. Others follow.)

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. [illegible]—With a flip of the hand—and a flick of short, stubby fingers, B. A. Rolfe, dance band conductor, conjures up a million little jazz demons. And he looks as though he were picking them right out of the air.

He has a fat little tummy—like Santa Claus. Looks as though he belonged with his hands placidly folded over it—beaming on the world benignly. But, B. A. is much too busy. He always has AN IDEA.

Innovations in Jazz

That is what has helped to make the orchestra he conducts one of the most celebrated on the air. The jovial Rolfe has introduced jews harps, saws, small boys' whistles—almost any amusing little innovation that helps to make noise—into his band.

Hailing from Brasher Falls, N. Y., Rolfe was born October 24, 1879. When a lad in high school he was such a trumpet prodigy that he toured Europe and tocted his way to fame.

This is an idea the conductor has had in mind ever since the youthful crime wave has swept the country. It seems sane and sound—and is well worth setting down as food for thought.

"I believe," he said earnestly, after his orchestra was through broadcasting one night recently, "the tendency of the small boy to show off before the world has a lot to do with the large number of lads who are staging hold-ups and murders for thrills. It seems to me if they had something else to occupy their minds they would be a great deal better off.

An Ounce of Prevention

"Nearly all of these youngsters are wild about jazz music. If conductors took a group and organized them into orchestras, taught them the violin, the saxophone and the different instruments that attract them, it would keep the boys busy and bring them together in a whole some club idea. I believe it would not be long before it would be noticed that they were staying off the streets and keeping out of trouble. These lads have no wholesome or interesting way to entertain themselves."

So much interested is Rolfe in the modern boy that he is trying now to get a group of New Yorkers interested in the lads who have nothing but the street for their playground, and finding some way to buy instruments and start them off musically.

Perhaps if you take up this idea in your home town right away it may save the windows and the new car from the attention of the little rascals on Hallowe'en.

When is An Indian, American? Passport Bureau May Solve It

By KENNETH GEORGE
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

Is an Indian an American? He no doubt is sure of his Americanism until he wanders off the reservation into a passport bureau with no other evidence of his American birth, than his Indian appearance. Facts not features interest the passport bureau, however.

Jackson Barnett, of the Osage tribe and reputed to be the wealthiest Indian in the United States, is at present in Los Angeles, faced with the job of obtaining documentary or substantiating evidence to authenticate his Americanism. For years he has desired to make a tour of Europe, and he had everything ready but the trifling matter of his passport—something that he most likely thought rather ironic for an Indian anyway.

With a bewildered expression on his typical Indian countenance, Barnett has been watching people less than ten years in this country, produce their naturalization papers and receive their passports. He just could not believe that further evidence of his birth in this country would be required than just his say so. But he has been told that he must conform to the rules of the Department, before he could receive his passport.

Barnett's wife, the former Anna Laura Lowe is with him, and is assisting him in collecting the necessary proof that he is officially a member of Uncle Sam's family. He has always believed that he was born in Oklahoma, but if he doesn't soon receive his passport, he'll begin to doubt that he was born at all. The Redskin isn't used to red tape.

COME UP BEFORE VOTERS AGAIN

Voters of Greene County on general election day November 5 will pass upon the question of continuing the county road levy of two mills for another five years.

This levy has been in effect in this county for a number of years and has created funds with which county road officials have carried forward road improvements.

Continuance of road work will depend upon favorable action by the votes on the proposed levy, according to road officials.

If carried, the levy would produce in Greene County approximately $112,000 a year, whereas if the levy should fail, road funds would be reduced in that amount, it is pointed out.

From an investigation of the funds accruing to the county for road building purposes from gasoline tax and motor vehicle fees, an insufficient amount would come from this source to permit a county-wide road program of any size, it is asserted. In other words, it is explained, the county would not even be able to meet township trustees dollar for dollar in building local roads.

Only that part of the gasoline tax which is apportioned to townships and the counties' part of 5 per cent of the second two-cent gasoline tax apportioned to the counties, are available for road building. The greater part of the gasoline taxes and motor vehicle fees accruingto any county must be used for road maintenance and repair work.

Among the several points emphasized by road officials in urging favorable action on the road levy on election day is the fact this is not a new levy and that it does not mean an increase in taxes but a continuance of the levy that has been paid for a number of years, and also that continuance of road work in Greene County depends upon renewal of this road levy.

ACCUSED OF MURDER OF HIS CHILD BRIDE

GREENUP, Ky., Oct. 24.—Wiley Childers, 27, of Ashland, Ky., is being held in jail without bond here today on a charge of slaying his 18-year-old bride, Virginia, following a preliminary hearing here yesterday.

Bond was denied by Judge R. T. Parsons, after Mrs. Childers' father, Maryland Potter, a tall mountaineer, told the court he saw Childers shoot and kill his daughter.

Potter admitted firing four shots at Childers, after, he said, the man had shot and killed his wife.

Childers denied that he had fired a single shot. He quarreled with his wife, he declared, and she had gone to her parent's home. He related that he had followed her to attempt a reconciliation and that she was standing on the running board of his automobile when he heard the shots. She dropped off and he fled after being wounded in the hand, according to his own story.

The father of the girl-bride said he fired to "stop Childers."

CHURCHES WILL HOLD UNION MEETING

A splendid program of music, readings and speeches will be heard at the unit meeting of the Mt. Tabor, Eleazer, Paintersville, Zora and three churches of Bowersville which will be held at the M. P. Church of Bowersville, Sunday evening, November 3 at 7:30 o'clock.

Each church is asked to take part in the program of the day and a large delegation is expected. A banner will be given the largest delegation. Eleazer Church now holds the banner.

Superintendents of each church are asked to figure the per cent of gain in attendance during the months of June, July and August.

LOTS OF TURKEY

THERE will be plenty of turkey for Thanksgiving Day. Although turkeys are considered difficult to raise, William Rife, farmer, living near Clifton, has a flock of nearly 1,000 turkeys, the largest in Greene County, ready to grace tables on Turkey Day. It is Rife's third yearly venture into the turkey raising field, his secret of success being the segregation of the turks from chickens. Chickens spread a disease that while fatal to turkeys are harmless to themselves, it is said.

"BACK TO WORK THANKS TO THIS NEW KONJOLA"

Lady Enthusiastic Over Quick Results That Modern Medicine Gave.

"Konjola was certainly kind to me; my one regret is that I did not know of this medicine sooner", said Mrs. Margaret Chure, 5708 Bridge Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

MRS. MARGARET CHURE

"I had back ache and rheumatism so bad that I was unable to work. Week after week passed and though I tried many medicines and treatments I derived no benefit from them.

"I read and heard a great deal about Konjola and made up my mind to try it. Just like I was told it would do, Konjola made its powers felt at once. My organs were cleansed and stimulated, and as their functioning became more normal, the pains grew less and less. In three weeks I was free from pain and back to work, thanks to this new medicine".

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Seventy Years Young!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE scorns that ancient prejudice which harshly dictated that age was a limiting factor of usefulness. To-day, old age not only commands respect but demands its place in every walk of life.*

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

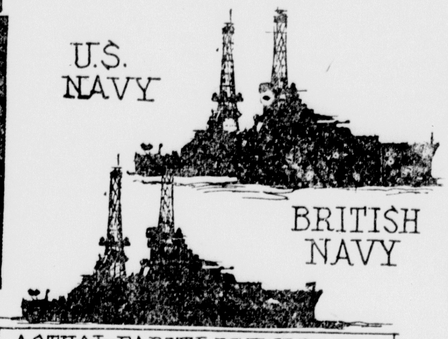
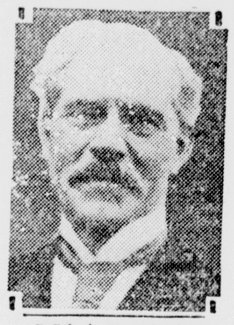
WHAT U. S. HOPES NAVAL CONFERENCE WILL BRING

HOOVER





MAC DONALD

With a five-power naval disarmament conference assured for early in 1930 and the success of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's peace visit to America acclaimed, the United States hopes to secure two concessions from Great Britain when representatives of the powers gather to talk disarmament again. The first, absolute naval parity, was conceded by the British prime minister in his various public utterances while in the United States. The second is the demilitarization of the British naval bases which are within striking distance of the east coast of America. Map above shows the strategic situation of these bases, which would make the British war vessels doubly effective in time of war. Insets are of MacDonald and President Hoover.

Poems that Live

"MY TRUE-LOVE HATH MY HEART"
(From the "Arcadia")

MY true-love hath my heart and I have his,
By just exchange one for the other given:
I hold his dear, and mine he cannot miss;
There never was a better bargain driven:
His heart in me keeps him and me in one,
My heart in him his thoughts and senses guides:
He loves my heart, for once it was his own,
I cherish his, because in me it bides.

His heart his wound received from my sight;
My heart was wounded from his wounded heart;
For as from me, on him his hurt did light,
So still me thought in me his heart did smart:
Both equal hurt, in his change sought our bliss,
My true love hath my heart, and I have his.

Edda Mussolini

El Ferrol, Spain, prides itself on being quick to note the visiting Signorina Edda Mussolini's resemblance to her fiery father. But its some 30,000 inhabitants are today pointing with still greater pride to the fact that they agree with Il Duce's daughter in her somewhat dictatorial stand on Spain's national sport—the bull fight.

While at this Galician coastal town, Signorina Mussolini characterized the bull fight as "cruel, bloody and repugnant." She much prefers football. A local paper published all she had to say on the matter, at the same time calling attention to the fact that El Ferrol is a modern Spanish town without a bull ring.

On almost the same day the Mayor of Navalmoral, a neighboring town, announced the arena is to be abolished and the money hitherto spent on the bull fight is to be used in building a school.

Edda declared:

"I am sure that in Spain you do not understand how far the bullfight lowers your national standard in the eyes of the rest of Europe.

"It is true that we foreign visitors seldom leave without having seen a fight, giving way as we do to a morbid desire for excitement for much the same reason that we would attend an auto-da-fe or a public execution, if there were any. Still, when we come away from such spectacles we feel the moral degradation which follows upon a deed of which we are ashamed."

Neither boxing nor football can be compared with the bullfight. In this respect she said:

"Boxing may be brutal, but a blow more or less is neither here nor there. In Spain and Italy the knife claims far more victims than the fist, and in the most civilized countries men still have recourse to knives and blows when angered."

Apparently somewhat taken aback by her own eloquence, the signorina added:

"Oh, I know Spain cannot be judged by an hereditary blot, which will certainly disappear."

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

CROWS

Who knows anything about crows? Is it true that a crow lives more than a hundred years if he has good luck, and that he seldom has bad luck? Are crows as wise as they are generally credited with being?

I know that farmers generally credit crows with much cunning. It is a common belief among farmers in Kansas, where I was reared, that a flock of crows will remain in the trees, cawing at you, if you carry no gun, but that the flock will take flight if anyone carrying a gun approaches.

As a boy, I used to try to determine whether this was true. We had a large grove of locust trees, less than a quarter of a mile from our house, and there were some tall cottonwoods skirting the grove. Crows used to perch on these trees by thousands at a time. I would stroll down to the grove while the crow congress was cawing its loudest, and create not a ripple in the loud discussion. I would throw clods at the cawers, and the only result would be a little flapping of wings and some more loud talk from the tree-tops.

Then I would go back to the house and get a shotgun. As I approached the grove the crows flew away, high in air and traveling fast.

At least, it was my belief that this was what happened. Since I have moved to the city, far from the crows, I have often thought that I may have been mistaken.

Recently I was talking to Miss Garnett Burks, of Washington, D. C., who has a pet crow. She got him on her father's farm in Virginia, four years ago, when he was just a fluffy chick, newly hatched. A tree in which there was a crow's nest had been chopped down, and Miss Burks decided to save the three little crowlets that were in the nest. Two died when someone fed them live angle worms.

Miss Burks says her pet is very intelligent. He is very fond of a cat who lives in the same house with him, and often plays tricks on the cat, pulling his tail and otherwise teasing him.

When the young crow was threatened with rickets, his mistress brought him out of it by feeding him cod liver oil and massaging him regularly.

"Oh, he's been a great care," she says, "but he has more than repaid me for my trouble. He's so intelligent. When I leave Washington for a time, I leave him at the zoo, where he is well cared for without charge. He is learning to talk from an Australian crow with whom he lives at the zoo."

I think crows must be interesting. Does any of my readers know anthing about crows that might be interesting to the rest of us?

FALL BRIBERY CASE RECEIVED BY JURY THURSDAY MORNING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The jury received the Fall bribery case at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Following a lengthy charge from Justice William Hitz, which indicated to them clearly they should not allow their sympathies for the broken and ill defendant to sway their judgment, the four women and eight men retired to decide whether the $100,000 former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall got from E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, was a bribe or a loan.

Hitz warned the jurors against holding a "reasonable doubt" on the basis of anything devised by "ingenuity of counsel."

Referring indirectly to the fact Fall is a sick man, the judge indicated that the temperance of justice with mercy was up to him and not the jury.

"And after all," said Hitz, "The question is what was in the mind of the man."

The judge called the jury's attention to the fact that Fall had lied to the senate about where he got the $100,000.

"One of his counsel," observed Hitz, "called this 'unfortunate' another one called it 'a lie that was justified.'"

Continuing his charge, the judge said: "Counsel has asked you to 'send this defendant back to the sunshine of New Mexico.' You have nothing to do with the sunshine of New Mexico."

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The senior Hallowe'en frolic that was held last Friday night in the Central High School gymnasium proved to be quite an affair.

The party was not to be a masquerade affair but quite a number of the students came dressed in Hallowe'en attire. It was a real Hallowe'en frolic all right and everyone enjoyed it.

The party began at eight and continued until eleven. The Rhodes Orchestra from Wilberforce that was scheduled to furnish the music notified those in charge at the last minute that they would not be able to appear. A popular Xenia orchestra was engaged at once and the dancing was carried on without a flaw.

The crowd was not quite as large as was expected but nevertheless the seniors felt quite proud of themselves.

This was the first function of the school year and the rest should be quite well attended. The next party will be a pre-Christmas party to be sponsored by the juniors on the night of December 6th, 1929.

The senior girls held a market last Saturday at the former location of Geyer's book store. They realized quite a neat sum from the sale as well as experience in salesmanship and baking. They cleared about nineteen dollars, which they expect to put in the "annual" fund.

The sophomores will hold their last candy sale in the hall, for a month, Friday. The seniors will sell the candy for the next month and then the sophomores will have another month. The freshmen class has not yet organized and vided between the seniors and the sophomores for the first few months.

The Hi-Y Club held a sandwich sale at 2:45 Tuesday afternoon and had a complete "sell out". They cleared about $2.50 from the sales. All hall sales this year are being conducted under the "five cent" plan. All candy, sandwiches and Eskimo pies are selling at five cents this year in order to enable the students to be able to patronize the different classes and clubs more frequently.

The first picture show of the school year will be given Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the auditorium. The title of the show is "Prep and Pep" and is given by the senior class for the small sum of twenty-five cents. All students are looking forward to the show and a full house is expected.

The next show will be given by plans are being laid to see if they cannot outdo the seniors.

Miss Olive Allen, English teacher, who was operated on for appendicitis at Christ Hospital Cincinnati last week is doing very nicely and expects to be back to her work within a few weeks.

Miss Helen Miller is filling in very capably during Miss Allen's absence.

The "Review" will be issued Thursday at 2:30. There are to be quite a few new features this week and everyone is anxious for the edition to be put on sale.

Radio programs are being given daily to the students of Central High by means of the new radio which is located in the cafeteria. Pupils are permitted to attend the sessions from 2 to 2:45 each afternoon who do not have classes at that time. Lessons in French, from station WLW at Cincinnati.

Quite a few different clubs and organizations have been holding wiener roasts this fall. It has been an ideal fall for the evening affairs so far and everyone seems anxious to get out in the open at night for a little exercise and refreshments. God bless the fellow that catches a cold!

Mr. William Hugh Miller, director of music in the city schools, and director of the glee clubs of Central High has been working his cast at rapid pace in order to get them in trim shape for the operetta "In Old Louisiana" to be given the night of November 1 at 8 o'clock in the Jean B. Elwell auditorium. With the date less than two weeks away practice is being held every night at 7:00 p. m. Costumes have been purchased and the scenery is being arranged. All indications and reports point to the singers from Central.

Tickets were issued Wednesday and the regular price of fifty cents for lower floor and thirty-five cents for balcony seats will prevail. Reserved seats may be gotten at Sohn's after 12 noon, of October 31.

The debate team to represent Central this year has not yet been chosen by Mr. W. C. Boyce, head of the English department. He is awaiting the arrival of further information on the subject.

It was announced recently that Central would have a debate team to compete with other teams in the nearby vicinity and also in the state matches to be held later on. The announcement met with the approval of several of the students and they are anxious to get started. Under the supervision of Mr. Boyce, Central should put forth a good team this year.

what not. He lost two games last week (Withrow and Muskingum) and on his return trip home Sunday received a shoulder injury that is bothering him quite a good deal. Rain has prevented any practice to get the boys out Wednesday night rain or shine and set through a "rapid fire" drill. a few changes in the lineup this week are anticipated and plays are expected to be work out.

Miss V. Madoline Miller of Chicago, wishes to announce that she will begin after November 1st, to receive

Pupils for Voice Culture

Miss Miller was a pupil of Serfin Pla, the great Spanish baritone.

"My! you look lovely to-night"

SHE knew the compliment to be true—for the last pimple had vanished.

If you are one of the embarrassed—and men are not exceptions—with skin blemishes that linger, and sometimes leave scars, you must realize that the logical cause may come from the blood.

A clear, smooth, velvety skin bespeaks loveliness. Men admire it. Women praise and secretly envy. Hope, joy, happiness, and even love, may depend on the possession of a clear, unblemished skin.

On the other hand—skin eruptions are outward evidences of the condition within. Authorities state it is an indication that the body's power of resistance to disease and infection is low. Meaning, that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and you sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to diseases.

S.S.S. is Nature's own tonic for improving the appetite, building strength, and clearing the body of so-called skin troubles, by increasing the red-cells of the blood.

S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has stood the test of over 100 years.

All Drug Stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

PLENTY OF VARIETY AT CHURCH SALE

WHAT do you think they're going to auction off at the community sale to be conducted Saturday by the Clifton Presbyterian Church on the church grounds?

Everything from livestock to fence posts, from autos to horses, from church sheds to coffee. And it all will be done in a business-like manner by six auctioneers who have volunteered their services.

The church asked for donations for the sale and the responses it received were more than generous. As a result automobiles, horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, corn, wheat, oats, cakes, locust fence posts, church sheds and from 200 to 250 articles donated by various merchants will be placed on the block and knocked down to the highest bidder.

Merchants from Xenia, Yellow Springs, Springfield, Jamestown, Cedarville, South Charleston, London, Osborn, Selma and Clifton opened up their hearts to the solicitors, and gave all kinds and descriptions of merchandisable articles.

Six auctioneers will keep the bidding lively. They are: Col. George Wallace, Springfield; Col. Lamar Titus, South Solon; Col. Guy Currie, South Charleston; Col. Carl Taylor, Jamestown; Col. Lewis Mead, Springfield and Col. Swartzbaugh, Springfield.

The sale starts at 10 a. m. and continues until all articles are sold, which is expected to be before dark. Women of the church will serve luncheon in the church at noon. While the sale is scheduled for the church grounds, it will be held under cover if rain occurs.

Mrs. Anna Bryan Ayres, of New Haven, Conn., an advertising expert who earned a salary of $100,000 a year, was found shot to death, beside the dead body of William Gaylord, a bookkeeper, in an inn at Wallingford, Conn. Police believe Gaylord, who was married, first shot Mrs. Ayres and then committed suicide. Mrs. Ayres was 41 years old and the divorced wife of Ernest Ayres, former Amherst College professor. She was the mother of three children. Gaylord was 46 years old, and, believed, had planned to divorce his wife and marry Mrs. Ayres.

Before Baby Comes

comfort and ease

The muscles, tissues and nerves must "give" easily as the abdomen enlarges or much pain and suffering may result. More important still, is to have the tissues and muscles as "elastic" as possible when the great moment of childbirth arrives.

Countless thousands of expectant mothers for over 60 years have been relieved by the use of "Mother's Friend"—that time-tested, scientifically-prepared skin lubricant and pain-reliever which originated in the prescription of an eminent obstetrician.

Mother's Friend lessens pain

You owe yourself the comfort "Mother's Friend" gives. It is soothing and relaxing. It is used externally only—gently rubbed into the skin. Clean and pleasant to the touch. Brings relief promptly. Very valuable in keeping the breasts in good condition. Also puts you in fine shape for the approaching ordeal.

"Mother's Friend" is on sale at all drug stores. $1.25 per bottle. Try a massage with it tonight and notice the ease and comfort it gives. A booklet on "Things to Know Before Baby Comes" will be mailed in plain envelope, free, on request. Address Bradfield Regulator Co., Dept. 15, Atlanta, Ga.

The food he eats is the man he'll be!

A CUT finger brought tearfully to you for first aid. The busy sound of small feet clumping down the stairs. A tousled head and one bright eye peeping from the bed clothes. He seems so little now—but the years hurry by... so much of his future depends upon the food he eats. For, good food builds good health—and health is the real foundation of a successful life.

Nothing can give you greater assurance that his food will be wholesome and healthful than a General Electric Refrigerator. Quietly and faithfully day and night this refrigerator automatically keeps food safely below 50 degrees, the temperature which medical authorities agree to be the danger-point.

The General Electric Refrigerator has all its mechanism hermetically sealed in a steel casing, mounted on top of the cabinet, allowing maximum storage space for food. It is extremely simple and quiet in operation, dustproof—never needs oiling. It has an accessible freezing regulator. Accept these gifts with our compliments

DO YOU think of your newspaper merely as a means of finding out what the famous people in the world are doing, saying, thinking? As an impersonal record of events which do not concern you at all? We have something more than that to offer you. For instance:

Please accept today with our compliments these things, which you'll find in our pages: New and better ways of performing old household tasks . . . means of saving steps, time, effort . . . labor-saving devices . . . short-cuts to efficiency . . . money-saving. "Why," you say, "you're probably talking about the advertisements!" Just so — we are.

Think of the advertisements-- and read them--as news. News of the world of good things . . . news of scientific achievement accomplished for your benefit . . . news that concerns you far more directly than an account of boundary disputes in Baluchistan can ever concern you.

Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to save you time, effort, money, trouble, when it comes to buying the things that make life a little easier. . . a little brighter. Reading the advertisements will keep you in step with the rapidly advancing standard of living in America today.

Every day there's something new in the advertisements as well as on the front page. Be informed on all sides!

Princess Maritza de Broglie takes the oath of allegiance to the American Flag in New York in the presence of Merton Sturges, Director of Naturalization. The Princess was born in California of foreign parents, and was held prisoner by the Germans in Belgium for two and a half years in the World War. At sixteen, she had married Prince Robert de Broglie, of an old French family. She is known through Europe as a dramatic soprano

The World And All

Which reminds me that alcoholic psychosis, in case you are interested,' is another name for delirium tremens, D T's or what the Omaha police used to call "snakes." ONE of the most interesting libraries in the world is the William L. Clements library, on the campus of the University of Michigan. A wealthy manufacturer donated the building and all the books and manuscripts comprising thousands of the most valuable items of Americana. Flogging and hanging up by the thumbs are still common practices in American prisons, and when convicts revolt they know they are going in for mass suicide, but most of them would rather be dead than alive.

The Woolworth building, New York, for 16 years the tallest building in the world, now loses rank to two other New York structures nearing completion. The new ranking is: Bank of Manhattan, 72 stories, 925 feet; Chrysler, 68 stories, 905 feet; Woolworth, 60 stories, 792 feet.

READ THIS FIRST:

It is the last day of high school in Rendale, and Rosalie March, seventeen, the prettiest girl in the graduating class, is a saucy little angel in her first really pretty dress. There is a senior dance, and for the first time, she is realizing an old dream and dancing with the class president, Neil McKinley, the richest boy in town.

Later her head is in a whirl when he sneaks away for a little while and takes Rosalie for a ride in his shiny roadster. He has come to the party with Mary Cunningham. He kisses Rosalie and calls her "his new little sweetheart." When they return, Mary, white with fury, creates a scene that sends Rosalie home in tears, her party ruined.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

Rosalie awakened the next morning with her head in a whirl. She sat up in bed and her mouth was dry and hot.

When she looked in the mirror she saw that she was very pale and her eyes were dull and dark circled. She dressed and went down stairs.

Her mother was frying eggs for breakfast when Rosalie walked slowly, weakly into the kitchen.

"Mother, I must have eaten something yesterday that wasn't good for me. I feel weak as a kitten—and my mouth tastes so funny.'

"I certainly don't want anything to eat."

Then Mrs. March was really worried. Rosalie had always had a good appetite.

"Maybe you stayed out too late, Rosie. What time did you get home?"

"Ah, it was just a little after ten. It couldn't have been that."

"What did you and Sybil do?"

"We—we listened to music."

She turned and went out to the porch before her mother could ask any more questions. Mrs. March, assuming the girls had listened to the radio, forgot the matter entirely.

It was just then that Neil came out of his front door. He crossed the street.

"Gee, Rosalie, I'm awful sorry Mary acted so crazy last night. She was tight."

"Tight!" Rosalie's eyes opened wide. "Do you mean to tell me Mary Cunningham would get drunk."

"Sure," Neil grinned, then noticed her pallor. "You're pale. Sick?"

"Oh, I just don't know what's the matter with me. I felt so funny coming home last night—and I just don't remember anything after I got in the house. I must have been awfully sick. This morning I am dizzy, and I can't stand the sight of breakfast. Maybe it was that lemonade with the bitter stuff in it. I didn't think of that."

Neil felt just a little bit ashamed of himself. Rosalie did look very sick. Good gravy! Was there any girl of seventeen such a babe in arms? Not knowing what she was drinking. Didn't even suspect that he had given her gin cocktails.

Roisalie couldn't bring herself to drop the subject of Mary. A little later she said primly:

"I don't see how you could associate with drunken women, Neil McKinley! What would your mother say?"

"Mother always serves highballs and cocktails when she has guests," he smiled at Rosalie and watched her surprised face with amusement.

"Neil! Your mother wouldn't drink that awful stuff." Rosalie looked across at the McKinley house as though it were some kind of monster.

He threw back his head and laughed.

"You baby! Don't you ever read books that teach you anything about how civilized people live?"

Rosalie was on the defensive in a minute.

"Oh, so my mother and I are not civilized because we don't get drunk and call people bad names and stay out all night—and make—make bums out of ourselves."

He reached over and shook her arm.

"Now, don't get mad, Innocence, just because I kid you a little. If you do I won't take you out for a ride tonight."

Rosalie turned away.

"I'm not sure that I want to go—after I see the kind of women you seem to prefer!"

Neil's manner changed, and he begged earnestly:

"Don't be like that, booful. We have to get acquainted all over again. Didn't I say you were my new sweetheart?"

She studied a minute, then one dimple came into play.

"All right. If you promise to give

"Promise to give Mary the gate."

Mary the gate—and not feed me any more of that terrible lemonade. Didn't it hurt you?"

Neil smiled broadly.

"Not a bit. And I'll make a bottle baby out of you yet."

She watched him swing down the street with a singing heart. He was the best looking, best dressed and richest boy in Rendale, and he was going to be her boy friend. It hardly seemed true, after all these years, that Neil McKinley would be back sitting on the March porch, and there would be such lovely rides in the moonlight.

When Rosalie looked over her wardrobe later her heart sank. Of course she couldn't wear the graduation dress. She came downstairs with a long face.

"Mummy, I've simply got to go to work and earn some new clothes. I'm in rags!"

Mrs. March turned white. Rosalie was shocked at the pain she had caused. She ran to her mother and kissed her.

"Darling—don't, please—don't be didn't. I just mean I'm through high didn't. I just mean I'mthrough high school now—and that I can earn some money."

Mrs. March sank into a chair weakly.

"My little Rosie. You aren't old enough to go out in the world yet. I couldn't let you. You don't know how to do a thing. And the world is wicked—Rosalie. A dreadful, sinful place. I know."

Rosalie smiled at her maternally, and sat on the edge of her chair.

"Silly little Elizabeth! I'm no baby any more. I'm going to go out and work—and I'll make good and I'll buy you swell clothes and you can walk down Main Street and all the boys will think you're Rosalie March's little sister."

Tears came to Mrs. March's eyes, and she sat back wearily. She felt tired and old and useless and failure. Rosalie was a young lady now. There would be boys, too. Neil McKinley had suddenly sat up and taken notice. Others would follow.

Rosalie washed the dinner dishes and made her mother sit in the porch swing and rest. When Neil came across the street, whistling, she talked with him a few minutes before Rosalie came out in a cheap little flowered voile.

They turned and waved as they drove away—and Rosalie threw her mother a kiss. Elizabeth March got up slowly and walked into the house.

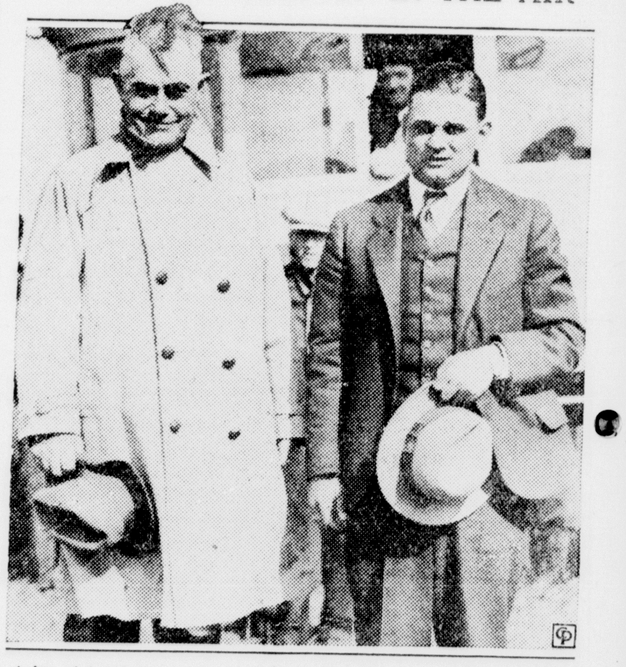
MICHIGAN GOES UP IN THE AIR



A lot of football strategy went up in the air when Fielding H. Yost veteran University of Michigan director of athletics, and Harry Kipke, gridiron star of several years ago, now head football coach took a ride over Ann Arbor, in the tiny blimp "Puritan."

The Theater

Is the American legitimate theater dead? Did the talkies in the future of the theater here? The answer to both of these is no, and the answer comes from New York, where the customarily brilliant amusement season is swinging into being.

Broadway itself, with few exceptions, is devoted to the talking picture but on both sides of "Hooey Hollow", the side-street legitimate theaters from 42nd St. up to the 60's, are offering the cream of the world's stage entertainment, garnered from every country where there are playwrights.

Xenians and others from the so-called Bible Belt, intent on getting to Gotham during the footlight era, need worry none about the inroads of the out-louds, because they will find the producers still holding out at the old-stands, developing new talent to replace those weaned away by Hollywood and still offering first-class entertainment.

The major successes of the infant season are American, as witness "June Moon" by Ring Lardner and George S. Kauffman; David Belasco's production of "It's a Wise Child" and George M. Cohan's "Gambling"—all typically American.

"Strictly Dishonorable" by Preston Sturges, another smash comedy, likewise is of the American scene—just as is Elmer Rice's "Street Scene" of last year, which is still running, as popular as ever, and which captured the Pulitzer prize last year.

Another success is "The Channel Road", the first playwriting attempt of the veteran critic Alexander Woollcott, collaborating with that man of successes, George S. Kauffman, who is dramatic editor the the Times. Rice has a second play this year, "See Naples and Die", a quite different comedy. George Kelly of "Showoff" fame, has his first play in two years: "Maggie the Magnificent".

Successes continuing from last year include two English importations, "Journey's End", a war story and John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand". Likewise there is the American "Let Us Be Gay" with Francine Larrimore.

Jane Cowl is drawing to "Jenny", Gertrude Lawrence to "Candle Light" and Elsie Ferguson to 'Scarlet Pages". "The Criminal Code", which rips our system of justice up the back, is attracting attention. "Many Waters" with Ernest Truex, just back from London, is getting the "carriage trade". "Subway Express", with a dead man the chief character, is leading the mystery plays.

Topping the musicals are "Whoopee", holdover, with Eddie Cantor; "Sweet Adeline", with Helen Morgan; "George White's "Scandals", with Georgie making a personal appearance; "Sketch Book", "Follow Thru", "The Little Show", "The New Moon" (another from last year) and "The Street Singer". And, of course, the revival of Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste" with the original Fritzi Scheff.

Of course openings are numerous—and closings, also. Soon to open is "Bitter Sweet", imported from abroad by Florenz Ziegfeld and Arch Selwyn. Included in the good things is Eva La Gallinne's Civic Repertory Co., down on 14th St., which is now playing Tchekov's "The Sea Gull".

The Theater Guild began the season with "Karl and Anna" from the German, which didn't go so well, but has several morsels ready, including "The Apple Cart", which is George Bernard Shaw's latest, poking fun at democracy and plutocrats.

Despite the destruction of the Waldorf-Astoria and the Majestic Hotels, there are even more hotel rooms for the visitor than last year. The new hotels, all giants, include The Lexington, the Delmonico, the Governor Clinton and, soon to be ready, the New Yorker, of which Ralph Hitz, former manager of the Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, is manager.

A burglar who tried to enter the home of Charles Ralls, E. Market St., was given a warm welcome by Mrs. Ralls, who fired several shots after him as he retreated.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beal, near Goes, would be very much gratified if the owners of the three brown and white spotted bird dogs would call at their home and take away the animals, which have refused to leave.

Th Xenia balloonists, Chas. Weaver and William Grottendick, are now soaring far above the clouds on their first aerial voyage. They got off from Buck Island in Dayton with a party of seven people in the big balloon, "Hoosier".

MATCH KING RISING TO POWER AS FINANCIAL GENIUS LENDS MILLIONS TO GOVERNMENTS

By ALEXANDER C. HERMAN
Central Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 24.—Ivar Kreuger, described as the year's outstanding financial genius and world's richest bachelor, has just granted this, his first interview with an American newspaperman since he became northern Europe's "biggest story."

This man, who a little more than twenty years ago was driving piles on odd construction jobs in America, just has completed an important link in his creation of the world's largest monopoly. He has gained control of almost all the wood pulp of his country, thus assuring his match companies — operating in thirty-five lands and employing 60,000 workers—of virtually absolute independence!

And he lends tens of millions to government.

So much is said of Kreuger by a few persons who know him intimately that their panegyric almost develops a prejudice against the man. Another one of the big business idol builders, we thought as we entered his office—a palace of simple magnificence, decorated in the finest modern Swedish style. But a few words with the man and all hard-boiled cynicism was dissipated.

His Story in Demand

There were to be no direct quotes in the story—for he had given his word to a writer, who had been trying to work up an article for more than a year, not to speak for publication. And he couldn't break his word.

Therefore, while this article may carry a few quotation marks, its contents are first hand. (After all, J. P. Morgan doesn't give interviews at all.)

Even aside from his special fields of engineering and finance, there is hardly anything that Kreuger doesn't know. He is a fluent linguist; has keener insight into the theater, both home and abroad, than most managers on the ground; can tell just where the world's best orchestras are playing—and what; has a sensitive appreciation of art, sculpture, architecture; plays almost invincible poker (a friend tells me); is one of the world's most attentive listeners, and one of its most silent men.

He has developed no hobbies, and hasn't taken much to sport (the usual tendencies following business success.) Yet his physical trim is striking.

How He Selects Men

His face would be that of a Sphynx—were it not for his eyes that pierce clear through. Their size-up is instantaneous, and their judgment seemingly infallible. He picks the men for his companies after a short interview and a long stare.

With them he has successfully fostered enterprises which point for world monopoly, not only in the match industry—best known of the Kreuger expansions—but in vast holding companies, bank direction and control of large natural resources.

Decentralization, rather than centralization—the orthodox method of super-business structure—is the secret of these successful organizations, an associate points out.

Kreuger has many lieutenants with many tasks. When new fields are entered, new assistants are developed. But while the vast work spreads out, the head of it all seems to have an uncanny way of knowing everything of importance at the right time.

A Noiseless Office

There never is any noise or bustle in the Kreuger headquarters, even though orders from them go to all parts of the globe at almost every hour of the clock. There are no gongs or buzzers. Every direction is made by automatic means.

When Kreuger, sitting at his desk, desires to discuss a matter with his colleagues, he merely picks up a special phone—one of four at his side—and the board meeting is on, with each man in his own office, partaking in the discussion without any waste of time.

In such conferences are worldwide movements planned—leading to the Swedish Match Company monopolies in Poland, Greece, Peru, Ecuador, Esthonia, Latvia, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Rumania; and the lending of $75,000,000 to the French government for certain co-operation with its match trade, and $120,000,000 to Germany for a match monopoly— the largest transaction of its kind that ever has taken place between a state and a private industrial group!

Kreuger was born in Kalmar, a small, historic town on the east coast of Sweden, on March 2, 1880. He attended the local public schools, the Stockholm technical high school, studied mechanics, road and water construction, and started to work when he was 20.

Traveled Far

He went to Mexico, South America, the United States, England, France and Germany, gaining experience whenever he could land a job. In 1908 he came home, formed the partnership of Kreuger and Toll, house constructors. This in time, grew into a holding company. Then the young engineer became interested in a small match factory which his father was running. There were many such factories. Competition among them was too keen to make much profits, so Kreuger set out to combine seven of the companies. He succeeded in 1913.

By that time there was another large group in the field, too. Further consolidation seemed desirable. This was effected four years later—and the Swedish Match Company was born.

Kreuger, who engineered the financing, became the match king of the world. He then set out to get control of the raw materials essential to the manufacture of his product. This led to the founding of a host of subsidiary companies—chlorate works, electrolytical plants, paper and pulp concerns.

Ranks High in Wealth

Just what Kreuger's wealth is no one knows—not even the possessor himself. For his fortunes have gone into many financings, the value of which fluctuates day by day on the world's stock exchanges. It is estimated, however, that he doesn't stand far behind the leading American billionaires.

Being unmarried, and looked upon as the prize catch of the age, Kreuger is beset with all kinds of special social invitations. He turns all of them down. For he cares little for society, and believes in having his own parties with friends of his own choosing.

He travels much—often accompanied by a married sister —and has homes in New York (in a penthouse apartment atop of Park Ave.) Berlin, Paris and in three places in Stockholm—always ready for occupancy.

The only thing the man seems to miss is a match, whenever he needs a light. Although his factories turn out millions daily, there never seems to be any for him.

NEW BOOKS AT LIBRARY

IMPORTANT FICTION

Byrne—Field of Honor

On a thread of romance the author has hung a series of events, taking European history from before the battle of Trafalgar to the battle of Waterloo. Says the N. Y. Evening Post—"What the admirers of Don Byrne will like most in his post-humous work is the atmosphere of Ireland. There is the romanticism which leads the Irish to fight for lost causes, the Irish song and folk-lore, and the mad, unaccountable actions of the Irish."

Gale—Borgia

The author here has created a new character—a self centered and self-pitying individual.

Williamson—Hunky

A psychological study of an inarticulate giant whose only means of self-expression is the strength it takes to shift bags of flour all day long. The girls of the bakery mock him, but Jencic plods on unheeding until Teena, boldest of them all, gets herself into trouble and turns to Jencic for help.

Walpole—Hans Frost

The N. Y. Evening Post says of "Hans Frost"—"It is one of the quaintest and at the same time one of the lovliest of Walpole's books. Both the flavor and content of Hans Frost are just a little quaint and old fashioned—and fragrant. There is present a naive wonder that life should in the words of Vladimir, be 'so old.'"

Oliver—As Far as Jane's Grandmothers

Jane's mother ruled her household by her power of non-resistance; Jane's grandmother ruled her household, and Jane's mother by her iron will. Between these two women Jane vibrated, a charming nonentity, even in her love affair, and she lives on a pitiful sacrifice to two women. The Boston Transcript says of "As Far as Jane's Grandmothers": "It is one of those revealing themes, showing how people 'get that way,' and it is terrifyingly true to life. Like so much of the truest and vitalist of modern writing, it is ironical."

Ostenso—Young May Moon

The account of an emotional woman, who leaves her husband in a fit of pique, but returns in a few hours to find he has committed suicide. She and her husband's best friend only know that it is suicide. They live with the knowledge for years until they are able to come to sanity and happiness. Not as strong a novel as "Wild Geese" or "Dark Dawn," but the reader is left with a pleasanter reaction.

De la Roche—White Oaks of Jalna

STATE NURSE HELPS HEALTH TESTS HERE

Miss Helen Felkner, instruction nurse from the state department of health, Columbus, arrived in Xenia Monday and will assist Miss Mary L. Smith, recently appointed City Health Nurse, to start upon her school program of examinations.

In this program all school children will undergo examinations, such as the testing of the eyes, the heart and lungs, to see if the teeth are in good condition and if there is any sign of a skin disease. Following the examination of each child a record will be made and parents of those in need of medical attention will be notified as to what sort of medical attention the child needs.

Work of this kind was begun Wednesday at McKinley School. This work is being conducted all over the state by the city and county health nurses.

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves other troubles caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they are suffering from nausea, from gas, or lack of appetite, etc.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it from your drug store is made in accordance with the original formula from only herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

John G. Bennett, of Kansas City, Mo. (right), was shot and killed by his wife (left) after he failed to make a bid in a bridge game. The Bennetts were entertaining neighbors in their home at bridge. Bennett failed to make his bid. His wife called him a "bum bridge player," whereupon, it is alleged, he slapped her face and folded up the bridge table. She rushed to the bedroom, secured a revolver and shot him twice. He died soon after. Now she is held without bail on a first degree murder charge for early trial

Film Blast Blamed; Many Are Rescued; Pictures Lost

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24. — One man was killed and a half dozen other persons were injured in a $6,000,000 laboratory fire that was quelled early today after a five hour battle.

Fire in a film negative stock room of the Consolidated Film Laboratories Inc., shortly after midnight, caused an explosion that swept the plant with flames.

Al Lund, a mechanic, was suffocated by the fumes of burning chemicals after he had striven to halt the fire.

Lund, 35, staggered into the street and collapsed. He was dead when a fire department rescue squad took him to a hospital.

Mrs. Irene Beardsley, Glendale, Cal., was rescued by firemen so badly burned she may die.

J. G. Nieman, whose heroic rescue of twenty girl workers, trapped in the fire swept halls, made him the outstanding hero of the fire, was critically burned.

Two persons were believed to be missing in the debris.

Miss Annette Anderson, also a victim of burns, accounted for the fire according to an unofficial report early today. She said she heard an explosion in a store room not far from the polishing machine she was operating. The blast set fire to a quantity of negatives.

The explosion of the negative gave warning that probably saved the lives of fifty or more occupants of the building.

All the engine companies of Hollywood and Los Angeles were called into action before the fire was controlled after daybreak.

Part of the battle was to keep the blaze from attacking the huge Paramount-Famous-Lasky studios across the street from the consolidated laboratory.

Flames leaped to some of the open stages of the Paramount and R. K. studios. Automobiles parked along the street by workers of the film laboratory were burned to a crisp by the intense heat of the burning chemicals.

Other explosions followed the first one, as the flames spread to vaults and drying racks, where a large number of "master negatives" of seven of the leading producing companies were stored for copying or repair.

Some of the films lost were irreplaceable, according to studio executives.

Among the master negatives reported were those of "Rio Rita," "Untamed," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Hell's Angels," "Hallelujah" and others.

"Untamed" was the first co-starring picture of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

The second explosion unroofed the laboratory, spreading the fire, as the release of inflammable gases sent the flames high in the air.

The torch of fire threw a weird glow over Hollywood as chemicals stored in the building colored the flames with an auroral light.

Until the raging inferno of chemicals and films had died down, firemen could do nothing except prevent the spread of the fire to nearby structures.

They helped lead women and employes out of the building while choking fumes sent many gasping from the nearby streets, several persons were slightly injured by the acrid gases.

The lost in master negatives could not be estimated until producing companies check their studio records, according to William Lebaron, vice president of R. K. O.

CLEMENCEAU HAS SUFFERED RELAPSE

PARIS, Oct. 24.—M. Georges Clemenceau, war-time premier of France who recovered miraculously from a severe heart attack early this week, suffered a relapse today.

The "tiger" found difficulty in breathing in the early hours of the night, and later his condition became so aggravated for a considerable period he experienced choking sensations.

Oxygen was administered through a tube to give relief.

Dr. Charles Laubry, his personal physician, and Dr. Degeunes, who treated the late General Foch in his last hours, held a consultation at the bedside this morning. They found Clemenceau much improved, but once again besought him to relinquish his incessant labors and take a thorough rest.

PRINCE UMBERTO OF ITALY MADE TARGET OF ASSASSIN'S GUN

Atlantic Holding Secret Of Daring Solo Flyer

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Oct. 24.—Officials of the Cunard line here today were endeavoring to confirm a report that the Cunard liner Soythia had intercepted a wireless message from the steamer Kyle that a third, and unnamed vessel, had picked up the wreckage of an airplane supposed to have been that of U. F. Diteman, trans-Atlantic flyer.

LONDON, Oct. 24.— Hope for the safety of the daring solo-flier Urban F. Diteman, Jr., was given up here today after an all-night watch by coastal radio stations and land lookouts over Ireland and England as well as ships at sea proved fruitless.

All night the great flood lights of Croydon airfield glowed vainly in the hope that the gallant Montana cattle man would make a belated arrival on his attempt to span the ocean from Harbor Grace.

A brief stir of optimism followed reports from Copenhagen that Diteman had ordered a quantity of gasoline cached at Julianshaab, Greenland. But when no dispatches were received from Greenland telling of his arrival there and when reports from the United States were received stating that Mrs. Diteman was certain he had attemped a direct flight to London, this soon died out.

England had prepared itself for a rousing welcome to the daring American. Diteman's claim to descent from Sir Frances Drake and christening of his plane after Sir Francis, famous roving Galleon, Ye Golden Hind, had added to the color of his enterprise, from the English view.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The grim Atlantic today held fast the fate of Urban E. Diteman, Jr., the Billings, Mont., cattle man who dared its wide expanse in a tiny open monoplane Tuesday and hasn't been sighted since.

As the hours passed, anxiety for the gallant six-footer who left Harbor Grace, N. F., at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday in a manner so casual that no one thought anything of it and then startled the world in a note he left behind announcing his destination as London, turned to virtual certainty today that he had fallen prey to the pre-winter storms of the North Atlantic.

One ray of hope pierced the gloom which followed the failure of any ship or any coastal community of the British Isles to sight him.

A dispatch from Copenhagen stating that Diteman had ordered 600 litres of gasoline placed at his disposal at Julianshaab, Greenland two months ago, gave rise to hopes that the daring westerner had changed his course and headed for that place instead of straight across the Atlantic.

But his wife, who with her two young sons, is still confident that Diteman will turn up safely some place, punctured this hope by stating that although it was her husband's original intention to fly to Europe by way of Greenland, he had determined upon a direct non-stop flight a few days before hopping off.

In the note he left behind, Diteman himself estimated that his gas supply of 165 gallons would carry him to London in about twenty-five hours with an adequate margin of safety.

But this morning more than eighteen hours over that estimate had passed without news. Builders of his plane, the smallest ever to be used in a trans-Atlantic attempt, stated that his 771 pound craft could easily remain afloat a number of hours if he were forced down, but aeronautical experts feared the rough seas of the Atlantic would soon smash his frail craft to bits if that is indeed what happened.

Diteman carried no radio and thus was unable to communicate with any of the numerous ships strung across the Atlantic on his course.

Young Student Is Foiled In Effort To Slay Umberto

BRUSSELS, Oct. 24. — Guided by his "conscience" which he said made his duty clear, a young Italian student at the University of Sorbonne today made an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Crown Prince Umberto of Italy during a solemn service at the tomb of the unknown soldier here.

The would-be assassin, taken into custody immediately after the attack, is Fernando De Rosa, 21, a law student, and a native of Milan, Italy.

He fired point-blank at the crown prince just as the latter arrived at the unknown soldier's tomb to lay a wreath as a mark of respect. The bullet went wild, and the prince and his entourage continued with the ceremony, ignoring the attack entirely.

With his face swollen from the beating he received at the hands of the outraged crowd which set upon him immediately after the attack, De Rosa told his story brokenly to the police.

He said he had come to Brussels from Sorbonne for the sole purpose of shooting the prince.

"My motive was my conscience," he said. "As a member of the Second Internationale (Communist organization) I saw my duty was to try and assassinate the prince."

One of the first to felicitate the crown prince upon his narrow escape was Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, to whom his engagement was announced only yesterday. King Albert of the Belgians called personally at the Italian embassy and expressed to the Italian ambassador, Marquis Durazzo, his regrets over the attack.

Princess Marie emotionally praised Prince Umberto's courage and his unflinching attitude. Never moving from the spot where he stood when the shot was fired, the prince waited until the excitement had died down, and then continued with the ceremony.

Extraordinary precautions had been taken by the Brussels police to guard against any such attack as that which nearly resulted in tragedy today.

That considerable feeling existed in the city over the forthcoming marriage was evidenced last week, when it first became known officially that Crown Prince Umberto and Princess Marie were to be married.

A group of about thirty demonstrators, believed to be anti-Fascists, raided the Italian embassy, throwing stones and other missiles and breaking a number of windows. The perpetrators of the demonstration were arrested, and scores of known anti-Fascists were rounded up and threatened with deportation.

Inventor Appears Well; Traveled In Ford's Car.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 24.—Smiling happily and apparently well physically, Thomas A. Edison, noted inventor, returned to his home here today after participating in Henry Ford's observance, at Dearborn, Mich., of the Edison golden light jubilee.

Edison and party arrived at 8:30 this morning on the White Light Limited of the Lackawanna Railroad. He was all smiles as he stepped off Ford's private car, "Fair Lane," in which he made the journey. He wore a black derby and black, crinkled overcoat.

"Well, it was a good trip—a very good trip," he remarked. "I had a very pleasant tmie. Mr. Ford is all right."

Mr. Edison had to walk about 400 feet to his automobile. His step was more springy than when he left and he seemed to be in better physical condition in spite of the emotional stress which overcame him during the course of the tribute to him at Detroit.

Included in his party were Mrs. Edison; Theodore Edison, son of the inventor and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sloan and their two sons. Mrs. Sloan is a daughter of Edison.

Edison's private car was filled with flowers.

MISSING CAR FERRY OVERDUE; VESSELS REPORTED AGROUND

Worst Lake Storm In Years Ravages Lake Shipping

By I. N. S.

A lake vessel with fifty-two men on board was believed lost today and three other lake craft carrying a total of seventy-three men were in danger of being pounded to pieces as the worst storm in many years ravaged the Great Lakes region.

All available craft on Lake Michigan turned to the search for the missing car ferry Milwaukee which carried fifty-two men on its voyage from Milwaukee to Grand Haven, Mich., officials of the grand trunk ferry feet have practically given up the ship for lost.

The steamer William E. Pilkey is aground and in danger of going to pieces off Detour, Mich., at the Soo. It has thirty-two men aboard.

Twenty-five men are reported to be aboard the steamer Maple Court which is aground near Cockburn Island, Lake Huron. The Maple Court's hold is filling rapidly as the waves continue to pound it on the reef.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—With Lake Michigan still a sea of fury in the worst lake storm in decades, searching coast guard crews today renewed their hunt for the car ferry Milwaukee, with fifty-seven men aboard.

Coast guardsmen along the eastern shore of the lake risked their lives in the gigantic waves in a vain effort to locate the missing ship yesterday afternoon and last night.

The Milwaukee carried fifty-seven men when it left the port of Milwaukee at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. At midnight last night it was thirty hours overdue. The ship was carrying twenty-seven carloads of merchandise to Grand Haven Mich.

The vessel is valued at $500,000 and carried no wireless, according to officials at Milwaukee. Fears for the Milwaukee's safety recalled the fate of its sister ship, the Pere Marquette, which went down near Sheboygan, Wis., in 1920, with a loss of thirty-three lives.

Airplanes today were preparing to go aloft if the weather permits and aid in the search for the missing vessel.

Coast guardsmen returning from the search declared the storm was the worst they had ever seen on Lek Michigan.

Other appeals for aid in finding missing boats were received by coast guard stations, indicating that fully 100 men on lake craft are unaccounted for.

Millions of dollars worth of property has been destroyed here and at other points along the shoreline.

AIR CIRCUS IS STILL MISSING

Already one day behind their schedule, the four green and gold airplanes of the Empire Air Circus, which were supposed to arrive in Xenia for a three-day series of exhibitions Wednesday noon, are apparently in the same category as the trans-Atlantic flyer, Urban F. Diteman, Jr.,—missing and unreported. A heavy fog prevented the flyers from leaving Mansfield, O., Wednesday and as nothing was heard from the planes by Thursday afternoon it was the supposition that fog had again delayed the departure for Xenia.

BANDITS WOUND GROCERY KEEPER

DAYTON, O., Oct. 24.—David O. Leslie, 64-year-old grocer, is today suffering from a gunshot wound in the neck which was inflicted by one of two negro bandits who entered his store last night just before closing hour and escaped with $25.

Leslie was wounded when he did not comply quickly with the negroes' demand to open up the cash register. His hurt is not serious.

FEAR DARING LONE OCEAN FLYER IS LOST

COLLEGE ATHLETIC SITUATION ROCKED BY CARNEGIE PROBE

Subsidized Sports Attacked; Denials Issued

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Rocked giddily upon its pedastal by the report of the Carnegie foundation, specifically condemning the conduct of sports in eighty-four of the 112 institutions surveyed, collegiate America today was rallying with denials of the perfidy charged against it. College presidents whose institutions were named in tones of opprobrium were not slow to deny the existence of conditions such as the foundation's committee claimed to have found. Deans and athletic heads were being quoted at length and in the same vein.

But in the midst of the denials, the foundation's report remained in black and white, a 383-page document that stood as a scathing indictment of sport in the American College at large. It did not level its attack in terms of vague generalization, either. The result of what is purported to have been three and one-half years of intensive study, it attacked specifically, the names of some of the most revered of our institutions being bandied about indiscriminately.

All told, 112 colleges, appor-

WHAT IS NEEDED

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—In its lengthy bulletin on college athletics, the Carnegie Foundation advocated, among others, the following reforms:

1. Reorganization of athletics to give true faculty control.

2. Elimination of paid coaches.

3. Elimination of personal exploitations, luxurious equipment and expensive traveling accommodations.

4. Increased responsibility of students in the conduct of their athletics, with more emphasis on intra-mural sports.

5. Greater emphasis on the intellectual development of the students.

6. More reliance on the athletic physician in the determination of events, engagement of coaches and trainers, arrangement of diets and decision as to which players are in condition to participate.

FOUR CHILDREN SLAIN BY FATHER WITH GAS

Mother And Fifth Child Fighting For Lives; Hamilton Barber Sought For Wholesale Killing; Neighbor Finds Crime.

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 24.—Their lives claimed by gas, which Coroner Edward C. Cook says, had been turned on by their father in a murder attempt, four little children are dead here today and their mother and another child are fighting for their lives in a hospital, where, doctors said, they will probably die.

Charles King, Sr., 36, a barber, the father and husband, is being sought by police and the coroner said he would be charged with murder when captured.

Authorities at Coldwater, Mercer County, where the family recently resided, have been notified as it is believed King may have fled to friends there for shelter from the far-reaching arm of the law.

The four dead are Keith, 5; Paul, 10; Leon, 12; and Robert, 14; Mrs. Sarah King, the mother, and a fifth child, Charles, Jr., 6, are seriously ill in the hospital and will probably succumb.

The tragedy occurred in the family's rented five-room modest frame dwelling here. The bodies and the two victims were found when a neighbor, Edward Osborne, 21, detected the odor of gas and broke into the house.

He found the mother and Charles, Jr., laying on the floor in a downstairs room. The bodies of the four children were found in their beds upstairs.

STOCK MARKET SLUMP CARRIES ON DESPITE RECORD TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—With blocks of 10,000 to 15,000 shares changing hands, trading continued at a terrific pace on the stock market today. The first half-hour of tarding was featured by heavy selling but early gains and losses practically offset each other.

A record transaction was that of Cities Service, which opened with a block of 150,000 shares on the curb exchange at $55.75, a loss of $3.25. Practically wiping out last night's loss, Kennecott Copper opened with a block of 20,000 shares at $78, an over-night jump of $11. A new low for the year was hit by General Motors, which opened with a block of 20,000 shares at $56.50, down $1.

Among the issues opening $1 to $1.75 higher were American and Foreign Power, United States Steel, Gold Dust, General Electric, Atchison and American Telephone.

NARCOTIC PROBE AT LONDON PLANNED

LONDON, O., Oct. 24.—Reports, which are current in official circles here, today indicated that a federal narcotic investigation may be under way here or planned for the near future.

It was learned that narcotic agents have visited London in the past few days and it is reported the visits are a forerunner of an extensive investigation into "dope" conditions in this county.

No confirmation of the reports has been possible, but it is believed they are founded, on facts.

Attempt Foiled At New Albany, Ind.; President Safe

IS SECOND ATTEMPT

Believe Woman Hoped to Kill Executive Some Time Ago

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Oct. 24.—Two men were under arrest here today on suspicion that they deliberately tried to wreck the special train that was carrying President Hoover and party to Washington from Louisville.

The men, in custody of Sheriff W. R. Helm of Floyd County, Ind., are said to have abandoned an automobile on the tracks in the path of the onrushing train.

The men under arrest gave their names as Charles W. Bullock, 19, and Young Wright, 43, both of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Sheriff Helm said he questioned the men at length, but all they would admit was an intention to wreck the automobile in order to collect insurance on it.

The sheriff said he has wired Jeffersonville authorities in an effort to trace the men's record.

The automobile was discovered in time and removed from the track without damage to the machine or to the train.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Attempts to wreck the train bringing President Hoover from Louisville, Ky., to Washington, were reported to the United States secret service today.

Joseph Murphy, assistant chief of the secret service, said two men are under arrest at New Albany, Ind., for "interfering with the train."

Murphy said this was all the message said. He doesn't know the method used to wreck the presidential special; whether interfering with the car wheels or tearing up or placing obstructions on the tracks.

"The men are arrested out there,

tioned geographically, were visited since the survey began back in 1925. Only twenty-eight could be given a clean bill of health, the report said. The immaculate twenty-eight, of which not more than a half dozen are major intitutions, follow:

Bates, Bowdoin, Carleton, Chicago, Cornell, Dalhousie (Canada); Emory, Illinois, Laval (Canada); Marquette, Massachusetts Aggies, Massachusetts Tech, Ottawa (Canada); Queen's (Canada); Reed, Rochester, Saskatchewan (Canada); Toronto (Canada); Trinity, Tufts, Tulane, U. S. Military Academy, Virginia, Wesleyan, Williams, Wooster College and Yale.

These lilies in the field represented just 25 per cent of the colleges visited and seven of them were Canadian colleges, at that.

Of the rest, some were openly condemned and at others a finger of scorn was pointed. The charges ranged from undue influence in the obtaining of campus positions for athletes to the actual maintainence of these men in school without visible means of support. And the schools at which ataletic systems did not meet, wholly or in part, with the committee's favor were named without apparent reluctance.

Among their number were some of the greatest institutions of learning in the land—Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Michigan, Ohio State, Vanderbilt, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Purdue, Minnesota, Notre Dam, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Alabama, California, Southern California and Stanford, to name only a few. Not all of them were alleged to be wholly reprehensible in their conduct of athletics. But, as to that, the committee, composed of Dr. Howard J. Savage, John T. McGovern and Dean F. Smiley, M. D., rendered an exhaustive individual analysis and let the reader judge for himself.

The meat of the survey is found in the chapter headed, "The Recruiting and Subsidizing of Athletes." Here what are alleged to be individual instances are quoted in the following paragraph:

"Athletes at a number of universities have been subsidized under the guise of salesmen of insurance or bonds (Columbia, Wisconsin); clothing store clerks (California, Drake, Ohio State); agents for business firms (Colgate, University of Iowa, Southern Methodist, Wyoming); sporting goods salesmen (Dartmouth, Drake, Texas, University of Washington, Wyoming); motion picture employes (Southern California); advertising solicitors (Michigan, Missouri, Northwestern, Pennsylvania); companions of children (Denver, Harvard); writers (Michigan) and otherwise."

At this point, the report drily adds that it probably hadn't occurred to the athlete so employed that he was "professionalizing himself by trading on his athletic skill or reputation."

It goes considerably further with Princeton and New York University, which it charges with "wholly or in part maintaining athletes at secondary schools until they are ready for colleges. And it goes whole hog with Fordham in declaring that its scholarships for athletes are supplied by the athletic association, requiring those favored to do no outside work at all.

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the foundation, wrote the preface to the report. In this he makes two major declarations, as follows:

1. The paid coach must go.
2. Big gate receipts, the training table, expensive railroad trips, subsidizing and proselyting and the system of "putting the good athlete but the weak scholar across the hurdle of examination," must be eliminated and the inter-college and intra-mural type of athletics substituted.

These, it is declared, are the remedies for what is termed "the darkest spot upon American college sport." The blame, however, is not laid upon college athletics. It is placed against the "ultimate authorities," the heads of institutions, etc. Boards of trustees, it is maintained, leave the question up to presidents; presidents pass it along to athletic managers and so on, the report declares.

"The "abuse," as it is called, is not confined to any particular section of the country, the findings add. This ranges, it seems, from "rare and casual contacts" with players "to an intensively organized, sometimes subtle, system that may utilize numbers of agents on and off the campus." In the former group, two of the lily whites, Chicago and Cornell, are named, as are Colorado and Washington State. In the latter and suposedly more venial group are named Michigan, Northwestern, Oglethorpe, Southern California and Wisconsin. In regard to Northwestern, it quotes President Walter Dill Scott as saying that he was not aware of recruiting being "officially" done, while Professor J. F. A. Pyre, of Wisconsin, protests that the charges of subsidizing "in full proce" are not "in my opinion justified by the facts." He finds, he says, no overt violation of the conference agreement.

The report thereupon becomes contradictory, since it lists Lehigh and Middlebury among the colleges that showed no evidence of recruiting, yet later failed to include them with the immaculates. Whereas Chicago and Cornell were linked with Amherst, Colorado, Oberlin and Vanderbilt as accepted by the "occasional acts of single individuals with athletic or administrative connections." Yet the first named pair were placed in the wholly approved group.

The committee claims to have discovered that these institutions maintained a recruiting correspondence, either on a small or a large scale: Alabama, California, Denver, Drake, Michigan, Montana State, New York University, Ohio Wesleyan, Oregon Aggies, Pennsylvania, Southern California, Rutgers, Vermont, Washington, W. and J. Washington State and Wisconsin.

It was mentioned that while the correspondence at Alabama seemed to be "unnecessarily voluminous, it was written with a care for standMontana State, N. Y. U., Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, the report said, it was necessary to appoint a member of the athletic staff to take care of the correspondence, so great was the amount of schoolboy mail alleged to have been received and answered.

Subsequently, the report again becomes inconsistent, in that having failed to approve thoroughly of Stanford, it lists the cardinal with Bates, Bowdoin, Brigham Young, Chicago, Cornell, Lehigh, Tulane, and Virginia as offering a good education as "the only inducement" to athletes who show an inclination to matriculate. However, Brown, Columbia, Oglethorpe and Wisconsin seem to be accused of sending out agents to establish contacts with athletes while Oregon Aggies, Pennsylvania, and southern California are charged with bringing athletes to the campus for the propagation of "pleasant personal relationships."

Amherst, Arizona, Drake, Michigan, Northwestern, Oregon Aggies, Purdue and Southern California, it is inferred, have alumni secretaries who have connections of "varying intensity with the alumna on one hand and the athletic organization on the other." In addition to these, it is said that the alumni secretaries at Georgia Tech, Vermont and W. and J., have become involved in recruiting "by correspondence or in person." The assistant secretary of Oberlin, the assistant to the president of Gettysburg and the business manager of Drake are mentioned having corresponded with athletes. Dartmouth, it seems, has an unpaid alumnus that looks after this work, thus giving it an unofficial tinge. Brown and Purdue, the report adds, have paid agents.

The coaches at Bucknell, Colgate, Columbia, Georgia, Georgia Tech, N. Y. U., Oglethorpe, Tennessee, W. and J., and Western Maryland are "expected or permitted" to devote much of their time to recruiting, it is added, and that "evidence adduced" indicated that Michigan, Ohio State, Purdue, Southern California and Wisconsin went in "for a systematic approach to schoolboy athletes."

The report names Indiana as having an alumnus who hired a special car to transport prospective athlete-students to the university.

Occasionally, it softens its recriminations—as in referring to Princeton and Stanford as taking a genuine personal interest in their athletes, aside from their ability and in mentioning Amherst, Princeton and Tennessee as having athletic authorities, who in three instances were opposed to some recruiting that was alleged to have been under way.

But, mostly, the indictment runs on, ad infinitum, in a coldly critical vein—jabbing here with a spiteful lance, pricking the skin there with the fine point of alleged findings.

All too few escape its venom. All too many are frankly charged with malefactions of one kind or another. For the former, there is the cloak of virtue. For the latter, there still is the chance of vindication.

The committee has dealt in what it declared to be facts. If this be true, there is only one course opened to the accused. They must fight facts with facts, granting that they have such things at their disposal.

As Ohio Woman Milks "Bossie"

Mrs. Irving Bastian Milks Cow in Park Avenue

A $15,000 cow standing in the middle of Park Avenue at Thirty-sixth Street, was milked by an Ohio farmer's wife.

Neither the cow nor the farmer's wife, Mrs. Irving Bastian, of Clyde, Ohio, seemed to think the affair was any great shakes. But to the several hundred New Yorkers gathered around, who had an idea milk came in cans, it was an interesting exhibition of the ways of nature.

The cow's name is Successor Sultane. The blue blood of the Isle of Jersey courses in her veins. She arrived in the metropolis from Mt. Kisco by truck.

She wore around her neck what is believed to be the oldest cowbell in Ohio, brought to New York especially by Mrs. Bastian for the Fall dinner of the Ohio Society at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Once or twice, as Successor turned her placid eyes toward the gaping throng, she emitted a mild and pleasant moo. When no one returned her greeting, she bent her head and tried out the stubby grass of the Park Avenue mall.

She even consented once to moo for the talking newsreel boys.

Mrs. Bastian did not wear what is popularly supposed to be the correct milking costume. She had on a blue ensemble. All she did was remove her coat and gloves, sit on an overturned pail and start to work.

AFTER AUTO IS LEFT ON RAILS

all right, and I am awaiting more information," Murphy said.

Lawrence Richey, presidential secretary, said at the White House all he knew was what Murphy told him. He said:

"Murphy told me it looked merely like a pair of cranks who tried to do something they couldn't do and that it didn't amount to anything. Murphy is going to tell me the facts when he receives them from New Albany."

Mr. Hoover is enroute back to the capital from his first long journey from the White House since his inaugural.

He left Sunday to be at Dearborn, Mich., to attend the goldea jubilee of the invention of the incandescent light by Thomas A. Edison, elaborately staged by Henry Ford.

Then he attended the celebration of the opening of the Ohio River by riding a side-wheeler steamer down the river from Cincinnati to Louisville.

After addressing the river folk at Louisville last night he boarded a special train for a speedy trip to Washington.

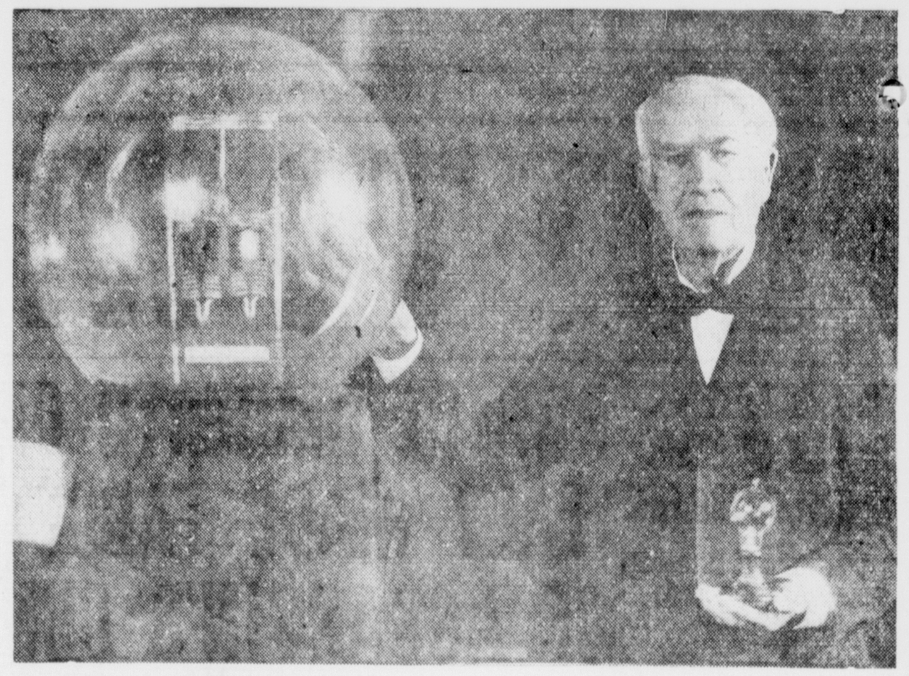
The attempt to wreck his train at New Albany and probably kill or injure him is the second made upon him since he took over the presidency.

Several months ago a woman from Frederick, Md., visited the ante-room to his White House office and tried in vain to see him.

Secret service operatives noted she acted queer and humored her, permitting her to remain in the room under the surveillance and telling her "they were doing their best to get the president to see her."

As the hours passed she left.

Two days later this same woman pulled out a pistol in the Frederick court and leveled it at the judge. A sheriff stayed her before she could shoot.



Thomas A. Edison, whose first successful incandescent lamp gave 16 candlepower of illumination, contrasts that attempt with the lamp achievement of the day, a 50,000 watt lamp capable of 150,000 candlepower.

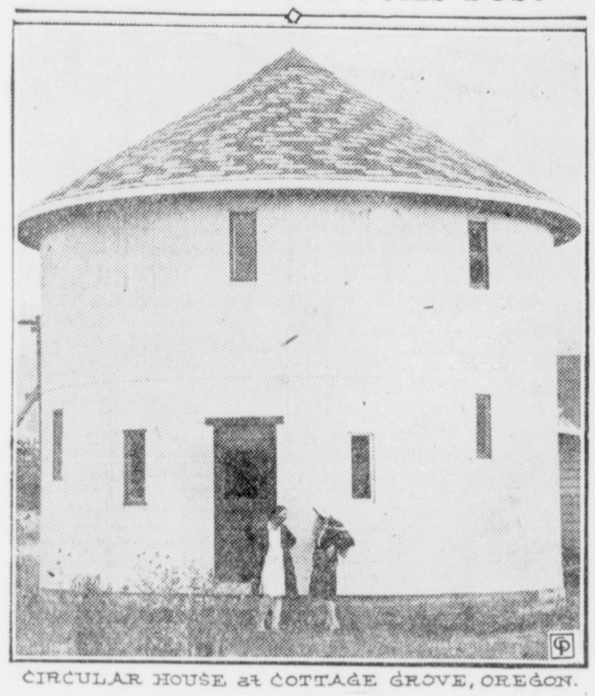
CIRCULAR HOUSE FOILS DUST



CIRCULAR HOUSE at COTTAGE GROVE, OREGON.

Central Press

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. [illegible].—The happy housewife of a unique residence recently completed at Cottage Grove will never be troubled with dust in the corners of her rooms. Joe Landess, who designed it and did all the work on it except for the assistance of another carpenter for three days, is authority for this statement.

Landess believes the circular house is ideal because it has fewer dust traps, more room space for the cost of construction, and better lighting. Windows are few and small, but the reflection of light from every direction because of the circular walls, makes the house as light as the average domicile, he points out.

Clamps Hold it Together

The lumber runs vertically, which is opposite from the way a house is ordinarily built. The up and down pieces are two inches thick and grooved into each other. There are no joists used, and the wood strips are held in position by clamps which encircle the entire upright portion. The clamps are reinforced inside.

Some difficulty was experienced in getting all the upright pieces in position at once, but after the clamps had been applied, the barrel was so solid that it could have been blown over without being damaged.

Floor Hung From Rods

The lower floor is one large living room. There are no supports in it for the floor above, which is hung from iron rods secured in the apex of the roof. There are three rooms in the upper floor.

A unique feature of this unusual house is a ventilator in the apex of the roof. A protion of the roof is raised and lowered with little effort by a cable. The movable portion of the roof is attached to an iron pipe that has been sunk into a timber extending from the roof to the ceiling of the second floor. Each room is so arranged that air within may go out through the ventilator.

HARVEST CANTATA TO BE PRESENTED BY TRINITY CHOIR

"A Song of Thanksgiving" by Maunder, a harvest cantata, will be presented by members of the choir of Trinity M. E. Church at the church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock at which time the union services will be held.

BELIEVE SELLING WAVE HAS PASSED

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Though the movement of industrial stocks in the early trading was extremely irregular and confusing, it was evident that the leading industrial stocks, including the steels, coppers, oils and electrical manufacturing were meeting with strong support, and that the wave of hysterical selling had subsided, for the time being at least.

Public utility stocks and motors were still under fire. National Power and Light dropped ten points to thirty-two and one-half; American Waterworks five points and United Corporation nearly two points. New low prices for the year were recorded in this period for General Motors, Packard, Riggs Manufacturing and Electric Autolite, all of which had exhibited extreme weakness in yesterday's hectic session.

The bankers and bullish interests, in a desperate effort to stave off a panic, bought stocks by the 10,000 and 20,000-share blocks, representing accumulated nation-wide selling orders placed before the opening gong sounded. Stock sales in the first half hour totaled 1,676,300 shares, a 300 per cent increase over the same period yesterday.

WINTER HITS OHIO; RELIEF IS COMING

Mr. and Mrs. Ohio and all of the little Ohioans began buttoning up their overcoats today as winter weather still held the state in its somewhat icy grip.

Relief is promised tomorrow, however. The official forecast, which was issued at Columbus, declared that the weather tomorrow would be fair with slowly rising temperatures.

The thermometer may ascend to the 50 degree point then, it was stated.

Meanwhile, another freezing temperature warning was issued for tonight.

Snow flurries were experienced in various parts of the state. In New Lexington, the grade schools were closed because the sudden cold snap found the schools' heating systems unfinished.

Northern Ohio suffered the brunt of the weather yesterday. Gales swept Lake Erie and stiff winds and slanting rain and sleet storms lashed that section.

CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Plans for the community Hallowe'en celebration to be held in Xenia under auspices of the Xenia Retail Merchant's Association Thursday night, October 31 are nearing completion, it is announced.

The outstanding feature of the evening of revelry will be a costume parade in which all masqueraders are invited to participate. The procession will begin its march through the business section of the city promptly at 8 p. m. and the parade will be augmented by three bands, including the noted O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band, the Bath Twp. High School band and the Osborn band.

The marchers will disband in front of the Court House on the south side where E. Main St. between Detroit and Green Sts., will be roped off. The celebration will be continued there.

A platform will be erected on the Court House lawn or sidewalk and a variety of novelty entertainment will be provided.

Announcement is made that fifty cash and merchandise prizes aggregating nearly $200 will be awarded by Xenia business men to those revelers whose costumes are most diversified. First prize of $5 in gold will be awarded to the best costumed woman and a $5 box of cigars is first prize for the best costumed man. The other prizes are for the best of a wide variety of costumes.

The entertainment which will climax the celebration will include a hog calling contest and a number of other features.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOD ACKNOWLEDGES HIS OWN — And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son: in Thee I am well pleased.—Luke 3:22.

THEY WANT THEIR OWN MAN

Very significant is the motion introduced in the Orange Free State nationalist congress asserting that the next governor-general of South Africa should be a South African rather than an Englishman. It is apparent that the Dutch, the numerically predominant section of the population, have not eased up in their struggle for political power, a struggle which has been raging since the Boer war nearly 30 years ago.

South Africa is frequently referred to as "the flower of British democratic development," in that its voters, limited to those of European descent, have wide self-governing powers. The governor-general, appointed by the king and the personal representative of the king, has little executive power. The office serves mainly to bolster u British monarchical traditions, and to this policy is attributed in some degree the continued loyalty of the dominion to the mother country.

There, nevertheless, has been an undercurrent of feeling in all the dominions that the appointment of an Englishman to this spectacular office is unnecessary. At each stage of their progress they have felt the urge for local government and less domination from Downing street. That this feeling is strong in South Africa is understandable. There always has been a tendency in the South African government to subordinate other considerations to the welfare of the diamond and gold industries, two enterprises which, while they have reaped great profits for the financiers in London, have never done much for the native population. The agricultural interests have struggled along without much assistance until recent years.

The Earl of Athlone is the present governor-general of South Africa and has proved generally popular. But the fact that such a resolution should be entertained by a national party congress is distinct evidence that the South Africans are determined to rule South Africa themselves.

The Ohio dance hall proprietor who has barred women without stockings and men without ties, knows that men would'nt go sockless anyhow and probably feels he must keep up a pretense of impartiality.

Now that a person can get almost anywhere in a little while, somebody ought to invent something to do after arriving that will be more interesting than turning around to go back again.

Those who insist that home should be more than a parking place, seem to be losing sight of the fact that often it isn't even that.

Representative James has the correct idea regarding the way to treat bothersome lobbyists. He kicks them out.

Even if a woman does enter the senate, it is a toss up whether she will be able to get in a word edgewise.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Old Doc Ziegfeld has a Chinese puzzle on his hands. He's made up his mind to make "Ming Toy," the musical version of "East Is West," his first production of the season and he's all ready to go ahead except for the fact that he has no score and no leading lady. The score doesn't bother so much. It's the prima senorita difficulty that's adding additional lines of care to his already Socratic phiz. He'd like to turn the part over to Marilyn Miller, but the thought of hiding her golden locks under a slick black wig and shafts beneath the silken pantaloons of a Chinese lady sickens him.

A STORY OF THE THEATER

The night "The Wizard of Oz" began its long and memorable engagement something like twenty-five years ago, there bounced out on the stage of the Majestic (now the Cosmopolitan) theater a tiny slip of a young woman looking exactly like a short-skirted doll. She played the role of Dorothy Gale and when she sang and danced she literally and actually "stopped the show." Her name was Anna Laughlin and for a decade thereafter she was an important figure in many musical pieces. Then she retired from the stage.

She came back last week at the Music Box but she was not visible to the audiences that nightly crowd that playhouse to see "The Little Show." She was behind the scenes giving aid, encouragement and motherly advice to a charming daughter who was making her first appearance on Broadway in an important leading role.

The daughter's name is Lucy Monroe, who for four years has been taking the initial steps that some day will lead to stardom. Before her Music Box appearance she understudied the prima donna in Fred Stone's "Criss Cross"—the same Fred Stone who appeared with her Maw as the scarecrow with the squeaky voice in the "Wizard of Oz" a quarter of a century ago.

A REVOLT AGAINST FASHION

Fanny Hurst has a fierce mad on the Fashion Barons. She's sore clean through from the bone in the upper left hand corner of her head down to the gambrel joint at the wardrobe they're asking her to don this fall.

"It' a mental yank-down, that's what it is," fumes Fanneh. "In the last seven years we've shorn our polls, released our legs from the thraldom of limbs, uncorseted our torsos and these things have had an effect on us in other ways. Now, industry, with a quirk of its hand reaches out and attempts to put us back. The leg is becoming nasty again, with its long silken coverings of skirts. It's no longer a means of locomotion. We're pulling in our waistlines, if any, and we're right back where we started from. Women mustn't compromise. If the dressmakers won't give 'em what they want, walk out on 'em!"

THE WAY of the WORLD

SUN POWER

How long can dirigibles stay up! Refueling flights give sensational demonstrations and teach us many things about flying. Now comes Goddard, head of the physics department of Clark university, and gives us a solar motor, harnessing the heat rays of the sun and converting heat into steam power. Dr. Goddard says his engine can be used to run machinery on the farm. And some day it may be adapted for airships. Little by little man will learn to capture and train for his own use the immeasurable resources of the universe. It is not too much to expect that men of the future may travel through the air by power derived from the sun.

AFRAID OF THE BIBLE

National Sunday School Union, of England, publishes a new version of the Bible. The axe of the censor falls upon its pages. The "Songs of Solomon" are cut out. Here is literature, as beautiful as any in the book. Authors of the new version are afraid to expose youth to part of the Bible while encouraging youth to read other parts.

Sometimes it seems as though the world grew sillier, less intelligent. So-called fundamentalists believe every word of the Bible, no matter what the cold facts of science may prove. Others believe part of the Bible and won't even let other people read what they wish to read and believe what they wish to believe. Others do not believe anything.

No man can tell you how much of the Bible to believe or how little That is something to discover for yourself. It is going back along the road toward the dark ages of the past for any organization to print a Bible and decide what is to be read and what is not to be read.

PROHIBITION AGAIN

Prohibition can not be made a success by legislation but must be justified "through public opinion founded on personal conviction." So says a preacher, making a speech. And he says about all there is to say, in a few words. We are not going to get far in any reform good or bad, without "personal conviction." The trouble with prohibition—and many other experiments—is that not enough people are convinced that they want it.

AS TO LOVE

Strange how people try to deal with love as they would with a matter of business or a matter of life's daily routine. One can no more argue with love than he can with hunger or sleep or any of the other primitive instincts that move and sway and largely control the human being. Love is or it is not. One is not argued into it or argued out of it.

INDIVIDUAL FEATURES SAID TO CHARACTERIZE EACH NATIONAL PARTY

By HORACE M. ALBRIGHT
Director of the National Park Service

(Horace Marden Albright was born at Bishop, Cal., Jan. 6, 1890. He is a graduate of the University of California and Georgetown university. From 1914 to 1917 he was clerk to the secretary of the interior. In 1917 he was assistant attorney, department of the interior, and assigned to the national park affairs. He has been superintendent of Yellowstone National park since 1919. He is now director of the National Park service.)

In creating national parks special attention must always be paid to the policy of the service that each site contains some natural feature so extraordinary or unique as to be of national interest and importance.

Each national park in the United States is different from the other and each has a marked personality of its own.

Mt. Ranier, in Washington, for example, is an extinct volcano, down the sides of which flow 28 glaciers, or rivers of ice.

The Yosemite National park, in California, in addition to its celebrated Yosemite valley and lofty waterfalls, has in the north a river called the Tuolumne which spouts wheels of water 20 feet and more into the air.

The Sequoia National park, also in California, contains great numbers of sequoia trees, of which scores are from 20 to 30 feet in diameter and some even larger, while thousands are over ten feet.

The Glacier Naticnal park, in Montana, has cliffs several thousand feet deep, and more than 60 glaciers feed hundreds of lakes. One lake floats icebergs all summer.

The Yellowstone National park, in Wyoming, besides its geysers, has many hot springs which build glistening plateaus of highly colored mineral deposits.

The Rocky Mountain National park, in Colorado, straddles the Continental Divide at a lofty height, with snow-capped mountains extending from end to end.

The Mesa Verde National park, in Colorado, hides in its deep-cut canyons the well-preserved ruins of a civilization which passed out of existence so many centuries ago that not even tradition recalls its people.

The Hawaii National park, Hawaiian Islands, besides its three volcanic peaks, possesses, the greater part of time, a lake of boiling lava which may be photographed at night by its own light.

The Grand Canyon National park, in Arizona, exhibits the mightiest chasm by far in the world.

THE NEW OCTOPUS

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

No matter what you desire in the way of avoirdupois, you can reduce or gain according to your wish at Mont-Dore, Karlsbad or Baden. The diets prescribed are simple, and could be carried out by any woman in her own home if she wished—but it is most likely true that the guests or patients at the watering places would never stick to the routine of the diet unless they were forced to it.

Breakfast is taken in the privacy of the boudoir—only not by the mildest stretch of imagination could the sleeping rooms of one of these Kur-Hauser's be called a boudoir. It consists of a plain white bed, a small table beside the bed, a chair and a dresser. They are stiff white ruffly curtains at the windows. The simplicity is more than made up for, however, by the floods of sunlight pouring through the window.

Usually, the night nurse or dienstmaedchen (maid servant) leaves a glass of milk or some stewed fruit which the guest takes immediately on rising. When the doctor does his examination for the first day he prescribes the diet which the person should have and designates it by number. Thereafter all the food served comes from the kitchen tagged with this number. Dinner is truly an amusing sight when fat and lean gather in strictly formal clothes—and everyone eats the food which has been set on the table. Each plate is decorated with its proper tag number. Never did the hostess of a novelty dinner devise such decorations!

Reducing diet consists of decaffeinized coffee, a boiled egg and a broetchin (a tiny roll) for breakfast; for lunch, a fish course and meat course (sometimes meat is substituted for the fish), plenty of lettuce with plain vinegar dressing, tea without sugar, and stewed fruit. Dinner is practically like lunch, with the addition of an assortment of cheese.

The gaining diet includes many rich, starchy puddings—rich cakes and chicken soups. Many a dieting individual looses courage on seeing the spread set before her neighbor who must put on weight.

No matter whether the Kur is enjoyed or not, it is generally successful, for it not unusual for the patient to gain or lose 10 to 15 pounds, depending on their desire. As is obviously seen, there is nothing in these diets which you could not plan for yourself, the rules to follow being simple. Eliminate starchy, sugary foods for reducing, and add them for gaining. A good scale is the only other requisite.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Uncle Sam's war-built merchant fleet was mostly carelessly thrown together from poor material at exorbitant prices.

No wonder he could not get all his money back when he began to advertise these ships for sale. Still, it does seem as if he might have done better than to put up cold cash to persuade private concerns to take vessels off his hands. It would have been cheaper to sink them than to get rid of them by one typical method which Comptroller General J. R. McCarl tells us about.

This was a bargain by which the government was to receive $325,000 for a line of boats it was anxious to unload.

However, it agreed to recondition them first, at a cost of half the $325,000—"more than half," according to McCarl, but he does not say just how much more, so call it an even $162,500. Besides, out of the $325,000, the government actually got only $28,674—the balance being pure hot air.

Net loss to Uncle Sam thus, $133,826—or considerably more than he would have had to pay a man to bore holes in the boats' hulls.

True, a $325,000 sale of ships does look better in an official report, for the public's benefit, than an account of the scuttling of the vessels to get them out of the way—more like Coolidge economy; decidedly so.

As for the $296,326 hot air item, and the item of the $133,826 loss—it was easy enough not to overemphasize them.

Indeed, they were not over-emphasized. Neither was a 10-year mail contract to the ships' purchasers—a contract for between $350,000 and $450,000 annually—or enough, as McCarl remarks, to "more than provide for the cost of the line" in a year.

Such details were rather "played down" and might have escaped outsiders' attention altogether if McCarl had not felt the urge to pry into the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet corporation's books.

It was in connection with the report he made, following this feat of expert accountancy on his part, that McCarl mentioned the sale by the Emergency Fleet corporation of 321 ships, which it cost Uncle Sam $408,062,898 to build—

For $43,962,308—on paper—

Of which, however, Uncle Sam got only $15,413,919 in cash—

Whereas, there remains outstanding an indebtedness due to Uncle Samuel of $55,326,005, inclusive of the sums still owing to him for various accessories, in addition to the 321 ships—

An indebtedness which would not be so bad if it were not for the fact that the Fleet corporation refers to $31,562,174 of it as "undoubtful or uncollectable."

That is, as McCarl pessimistically observes, 60 per cent of it is n. g.

The comptroller general adds that the corporation appears to have dealt with many irresponsible firms—but after the figures quoted, it seems superfluous to rub it in like that.

"It is my understanding," says the statement issued by President Hoover, in ordering a justice department investigation, following the McCarl report, "that there is no charge of misfeasance."

And curiously enough, not only is there little suspicion of "misfeasance" among Emergency Fleet corporation officials, but few folks who have watched the fleet's vicissitudes in the last few years are inclined to accuse them of much, if any, mismanagement that they could have helped.

No policy of the Coolidge administration was more relentlessly pursued than the policy of ridding the government of its merchant marine—at whatever cost.

Officials held responsible for this policy's fulfillment sold ships for what they could get—or quit.

The turnover in presidents of the Emergency Fleet corporation was mighty rapid during the Coolidge regime—it was hardly in human nature for a shipping executive not to balk sooner or later, at one bargain counter transaction or another that he was required to indorse.

Farly, Palmer, Crowley, Dalton—a name had scarcely time to appear on the corporations office door before a fresh one took its place.

It was not ships alone.

Twenty-one electric fans sold for $5.10 the lot. An engine which cost $105,000 sold for $2,500. A debt of $100,000 cancelled for $16,000.

McCarl lists items like these into the millions.

It got the government out of the shipping business, anyway.

Uncooked Wheat Cereal with Cream

LUNCHEON
Pear Salad with Toasted Whole Wheat Muffins

DINNER
Baked Tomato with Egg

In this menu, planned for two people, I suggest splitting and toasting the breakfast muffins for luncheon. Meat is omitted for the day, the egg and tomato dish replacing it in the dinner menu.

Baked Tomato With Egg—Select one large tomato for each member of the family. Wash and remove the stem end, but do not peel. With a teaspoon, carefully hole out a cavity large enough to hold an egg. Sprinkle the inside of the tomato with salt. Into each drop a small piece of butter and an egg. Salt and pepper the egg and top with grated cheese. Place in a flat casserole and between the tomatoes scatter the pieces removed from the centers. Set these. Bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees. If you desire the egg yolk, hard bake five or ten minutes longer.

FOR THANKSGIVING DINNER

PUMPKIN CUSTARD PIE
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Peel and cube pumpkin to fill three cups. Stem or boil in a pint of water containing one-half teaspoon salt, from twenty-five to forty minutes, or until tender. Drain mash and strain. Or use canned pumpkin. Custard: One-fourth teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups strained pumpkin, one teaspoon cinnamon, one and one-half cups milk, two-thirds cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon ginger, two eggs, one-half cup cream. Mix the pumpkin with the brown sugar and simmer gently for twenty minutes. Pumpkin so prepared makes a richer pie filling. Before taking from the fire add the spice and salt. Cool. Then beat the eggs well into the pumpkin mixture, adding the milk and cream lastly. Line individual tins with pastry and brush the bottoms of each with the white of egg to prevent a soggy crust before pouring in the pumpkin mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes or until the custard is firm in the center when tried with a thin-bladed knife. Naturally this pie may be made in the daytime and served cold.

Diet and Health

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Is Yellow Milk Better Than White?

"Most people think that yellow milk is better than the white. The butter-fat test does not always say so. Does yellow milk have more vitamins? J."

It would, if it had more cream, J., for the vitamin that is highest in milk is vitamin A, the growth and disease-resisting vitamin, and most of this vitamin is in the cream.

The butter-fat from Guernsey and Jersey cows is naturally highly colored and there is a greater proportion of it, so the milk would be more highly colored. (The milk from the Holstein cows is comparatively white.) Judging from this, the naturally deeper colored milk would be richer in vitamin A.

When cows are on fresh pasture in summer, the milk is deeper in color and richer in vitamins than when they are on dry feed during the winter, not only because the cow is getting more vitamins in its fodder, but because it is exposed to sunlight.

It has been observed that for some unknown reason the yellow coloring matter in foods is often (not always) an indication of the richness of vitamin A. For instance, yellow sweet corn contains more than the white; carrots contain more than parsnips; sweet potatoes more than white. I will add that not infrequently the richer milks of the Jersey and Guernsey cows won't agree with some babies on account of the extra fat, where that of the less rich milk of the Holsteins will. It is usually considered best, however, to give babies milk from the mixed herds.

Remember that unless the milk is certified, it must be either pasteurized or boiled.

Pica

"Five years ago an intense longing for starch came over me, and I used to take one-half pound box a week, but now it takes almost that much a day to satisfy the craving. The craving is worse right after meals, not matter how nourishing a meal I have, and if I don't eat at least one-third of a half-pound box, I am hungry again within a half-hour after eating. Is this habit injurious? What effect will it have on me, and what can I do to break myself of the habit? MRS. S."

You are suffering from a form of the disorder known as Pica, Mrs. S., that is, an appetite for inedible substances such as dirt, slate, chalk, etc. Not frequently, pica indicates a mineral deficiency (but the substances chosen to nibble on does not necessarily furnish that lack).

According to your figures, you are getting about three ounces of raw starch twice a day. An ounce of dry starch is 120 calories, so you are getting around 700 C. a day and if it is in excess of your needs that would make you gain over 60 pounds in a year! besides most decidedly unbalancing your diet. Pure starch is solely an energy food, supplying no vitamins, mineral elements, nor protein (building and repair food) and when you take energy food in excess, even though you are taking considerable of the needed elements, it makes them relatively insufficient.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

GREY EYES: Yours is the old question of what to do when your parents won't let you go with boys. As you are 19 you are certainly old enough to have boy friends and to be allowed to go out as long as you don't injure your health. I don't know what parents expect of young people like you.

But what can I say? If you "slip out" and go and they find it out they will be harder on you than ever, and besides, I hate the deception and sneakiness of that kind of thing. Going joy riding with boys you know well and whom you can trust, is perfectly all right, but parents have come to have a horror of such pleasures from hearing of things that sometimes happen to girls. Your parents can't deny you the natural recreations of your age for much longer, Grey Eyes, so I can only advise you to be as patient as possible until they come to their senses.

"DEAREST VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl in my teens and in love with a boy two years my senior. We went together about six months, and during this time we promised each other not to go with anyone else. I didn't keep my promise, although I think he did. When he found out how I had been going with other boys he quit coming. Now he is going with another girl. Tell me how I can win him back.

"HEARTBROKEN BABY."

I don't imagine you can. You deceived him and broke his faith in you and he's probably, very sensibly, decided that a girl who would not keep such a promise is not the girl for him.

BLUE EYED BET: There is no harm in going with boys if your parents approve, Bet, and unless you are foolish and cheap in your actions when with them I cannot see why the girls' mother would condemn you.

Possibly the mothers do not approve of a girl of your age going with boys and they are afraid you will make their daughters dissatisfied if they are chummy with you. Why not let the boys go for awhile and cultivate the girls and try to get to know the mothers and prove that you are a good pal for their daughters?

As to the boy friend. I think it would be much wiser to let him go, as he seems disinclined to go to your home and is jealous. You do not want a loafer who hangs around corners for a friend.

BROKEN HEARTED NAN: A girl of 19 is old enough to go out without a member of the family tagging along. However, it is much better to have a big brother's escort to a dance than to go with other girls. Your family probably feels that that does not look well and will not get you the best reputation.

Why not accept your father's or brother's escort until you get a boy friend, be glad you have some one to look out for you, and get as much out of their companionship as you can. Brothers don't usually want to bother with sisters.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 16 years old and full of pep. I run with a bunch that is peppy, too. None of them are fresh and none like to pet, but they do like to smoke, drink, dance and have a good time.

"One of my girl friends is old-fashioned and wants me to quit going with this gang. I like her very much and I like to go with the gang and have a good time. What should I do? PEPPY."

I don't see why you can't dance and have a peppy time and still cut out the drinking and smoking, Peppy. That sort of thing is bad for anyone and you'll probably regret it later. Try out the girl friend's program for awhile and see if you don't get as much kick out of it as you do in running with the faster bunch.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I would like your advice. I am a girl of 17 and go with a boy 16. We have been friends for about four years. He says he loves me and I am sure I love him, but he won't come to see me. I have asked him to, telling him my parents don't care. He won't come and won't tell me the reason why. LOVING MAE."

I presume he's shy of meeting the family, Mae. He may get over it in a year or so, so don't let it worry you.

JUST BROWN EYES: It is the boy's place to come to see you or write you, Brown Eyes. He knows where you live, doesn't he? Don't worry about meeting him, and probably fate will bring you together.

ANXIOUS PEGGY: I think I'd start going with other boys right away, Peggy, and would not take the boy friend back when he comes this time. Why be a doormat for him, even if you do love him?

Peter's Adventures

THE LIGHT WORSHIPPERS.

Peter was relieved to find the moths growing more friendly. Soon it was evident they had forgiven him and forgotten the sad fate that had befallen some of their less lucky brothers. Suddenly the old general made a remark that surprised Peter, whose memory was longer.

"I am rather sorry now that those boys didn't catch me. Then they would have had something to be proud of! By the way, I think I see a pool over yonder. I must see if my wings are tilted as they should be," and off flew the vain fellow to admire himself in the water which the moon lighted up like a mirror. The other moths flew after him, delighted at a chance to view their own beauty.

Moon-moth was the only one of them all who didn't dash off to the pool mirror.

"Pooh," said he to Peter, "I'd much rather be drinking honey or playing tag with the fireflies than gazing at myself in the water. I am good looking and I know it and that satisfies me. I don't have to be staring at myself every little while, that's one thing sure. But look! Yonder is a light! See how beautiful it is. Come, brothers, come. Leave that pool and le us go to the light. It is calling us."

"Where is it, Moon-moth?" cried the nightflyers, eagerly. "Tell us quickly, so we may go and warm ourselves in its rays."

"Just over beyond that clump of trees," replied Moon-moth. "I saw it first, and so I will lead you to it." Off he started, flying so quickly that Peter had all that he could do to cling fast to his seat.

The others quickened their pace too, and Peter sailed on surrounded on all sides by the flyers of the night, who, as they flew, chanted this pretty song:

"Light, light, beautiful light,
Shining to guide us in our flight,
Happy and care free
We fly to worship thee
Warm us and welcome
The flyers of night."

War has been declared by Ohio State University officials on stunt flying over the Ohio stadium during football games.

Two weeks ago at the Ohio State-Iowa game one flyer was "grounded" as a result of his antics and in order to prevent a repetition of the incident university authorities expect to co-operate with federal officials.

A watch will be kept during the State-Indiana game at Columbus Saturday for aviators who seemingly disregard safety precautions by stunting or hovering over the stadium. University officials have been promised the co-operation of John M. Vorys, state director of aeronautics, in the effort to safeguard football crowds from reckless flying.

Vorys personally reported one offending flyer to the U. S. department of commerce while in Washington this week, following complaints made about reckless flying over the stadium during the State-Iowa game two weeks ago. His report was backed by affidavits.

A local ordinance to incorporate the federal air traffic laws so that Columbus government officials can help enforce the code is also being drafted by Vorys and city officials. Flying of aircraft at low altitudes over the stadium during games is also prohibited by university regulations.

When the Buckeyes and Hoosiers meet at Columbus Saturday in the Ohio stadium, Coaches Sam Willaman, of Ohio State, and Pat Page, of Indiana, through their respective squads, will have their first battle of wits in the Big Ten.

The game will mark the first time a football team coached by Pat Page has shown its wares in the Ohio stadium, and it will be the first time in five years Indiana has appeared at Columbus. The last time was in 1924 when, with the score 12 to 7 against them, the Buckeyes marched the length of the field only to fail to make a touchdown on the fourth down a yard from the goal line as the game ended.

Although State is made the favorite for the first time this season in a Big Ten game by the pre-game "dope," the squad is not over-confidant and is not discounting the ability of Indiana, which already has lost to Notre Dame, Chicago and Colgate.

One of baseball's most colorful pitchers—Joe McGinnity, known as the "Iron Man" of the National League a quarter century ago, is near death at his home in Brooklyn, having failed to rally after an operation August 27 for removal of a tumor. Since then a second tumor has developed and another operation was deemed inadvisable by attending surgeons in view of the old pitcher's weakened condition. There is virtually no hope for his recovery. McGinnity is 58 years of age and his baseball career spanned thirty-two years.

Because of the cadet schedule which terminates in mid-year examinations, there is little liklihood of a football game between the United States Military and Naval Academies, better known as the Army and Navy, this fall, it is disclosed by the war department. Regardless of the outcome of negotiations which have been in progress, the gridiron classic cannot resume this year because examinations at the military academy are between the Notre Dame game, November 30, and December 18, when the team will leave to play Stanford December 28.

BANKER IS DEAD

BUCCANEERS ENJOY LIGHT PRACTICES; SHAKE-UP EXPECTED

Blue And White Has Never Bowed To Burg Eleven

Xenia Central High School gridders are hoping for a long-deferred brace in their football fortunes in the second Miami Valley League game of the season with Miamisburg High School Saturday afternoon. The game will be staged at Harmon Field in Miamisburg and will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Rainy weather has interfered to a great extent with practice of the squad this week. Because of continuous rain no workouts were held Monday or Tuesday afternoons. Wednesday the players had an indoor practice session, held in the school gymnasium.

In their stocking feet, the Buccaneer footballers were put through formations although there was no scrimmage. The team is seeking to perfect new plays given it by Coach Wilson in an effort to obtain a more diversified offense.

It is also probable that radical changes may be made in the starting lineup for the Miamisburg game as frequent injuries to regulars have forced Coach Wilson to experiment with different combinations practically every game in an attempt to find eleven players who will work together most smoothly.

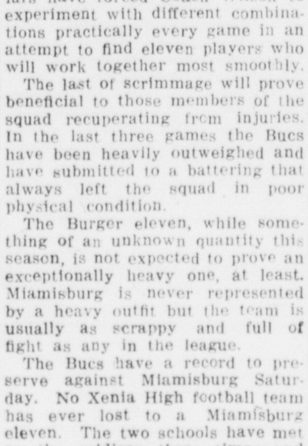
The last of scrimmage will prove beneficial to those members of the squad recuperating from injuries. In the last three games the Bucs have been heavily outweighed and have submitted to a battering that always left the squad in poor physical condition.

The Burger eleven, while something of an unknown quantity this season, is not expected to prove an exceptionally heavy one, at least. Miamisburg is never represented by a heavy outfit but the team is usually as scrappy and full of fight as any in the league.

The Bucs have a record to preserve against Miamisburg Saturday. No Xenia High football team has ever lost to a Miamisburg eleven. The two schools have met on the gridiron three times and in each game Xenia has emerged the victor, but only after a hard struggle.

Officials for Saturday's game will be: referee, Mattis, Otterbein College; umpire, Bishop, Ohio State; and Schenck, Dayton head linesman.

Personalities IN SPORT



HARRY HEILMAN, who has been sold to the Cincinnati Reds, served more than a decade with the Detroit Tigers. He came to Detroit from the Portland club in 1914, and after being sent to San Francisco on option, he returned to the Tigers in 1915. He played regularly ever since, with the exception of 1918, when he was in the navy, and has always been among the leading American League hitters.

Grace on the other end of the line used a similar larynx, although his voice is normal.

Next year's schedule will include even more big time college attractions in Cleveland. Home games are played at Dunn Field.

WILL CONTEST SUIT STARTED IN COURT

Jury trial of a suit contesting the validity of the will of the late Labron H. Atkinson, who died March 3, 1928, filed by heirs of the estate, opened in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning.

Plaintiffs in the action are John R. Atkinson, Mary M. Cooper and Clarence Folkerth, as guardian of Jessie and Elizabeth Folkerth, minors. The decedent is the father of John Atkinson and the grandfather of the other plaintiffs. All of the defendants are relatives of the deceased.

It is asserted that a paper purporting to be the last will, dated January 7, 1928 and admitted to probate March 26, 1928, is not the actual last will. For that reason the plaintiffs seek to have the document declared invalid.

PLAY IS PLEASING

Big Ten Director Defends Group; Claim Not Fair

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — The eighty-four colleges not approved in the Carnegie foundation report on college athletics are as follows:

Allegheny, Bucknell, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Colgate, Columbia, Dickenson, Fordham, Franklin and Marshall, Geneva, Gettysburg, Grove City, Hobart, University of Pennsylvania, Lafayette, Lebanon Valley, Lehigh, Muhlenberg, New York University, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Rutgers, Syracuse, Ursinus, Washington and Jefferson.

Alabama, Centre, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Baylor, Oklahoma, Southern Methodist, University of Texas, Arizona, Brigham Young, Colorado, Denver, Idaho, Montana State, Utah, Wyoming.

California, Oregon State, Southern California, Stanford, University of Washington, Washington State, Hamilton, Susquehanna.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics in the Big Ten, today defended Western Conference schools in the face of the Carnegie report criticizing alleged subsidizing practices.

"I have not had an opportunity to read the report," the athletic commissioner stated, "but judging from excerpts I don't believe the Carnegie investigators have given a fair picture of conference conditions.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of. I think that I am better informed of Big Ten athletic conditions that any investigator for the Carnegie foundation. And I honestly believe that the Western Intercollegiate Conference universities are cleaner in regard to proselytiing and subsidizing athletics than are any other ten universities than can be named.

"Five years ago the Big Ten athletic leaders carefully defined recruiting and subsidizing and launched war on these outlawed tactics. When the Carnegie report relies upon the facts uncovered by an agent in a twenty-four hour visit to a university, it seems to me that it is evident that the report cannot be always fair to the institution."

IN SAFE STEALING CHARGES BY MAYOR

Pleading guilty to charges of burglary and larceny, Harold Lemon, 22, J. R. Yeakley, 20, and Virgil Jenkins, 20, who are alleged by police to have broken into the "Baseball Smokery," operated by "Chick" Harlow, Dayton, at 11 1-2 E. Main St., at 1 a. m. Wednesday and attempted to steal a 400-pound safe containing $200, were bound over to the grand jury by Mayor Karl R. Babb Wednesday night. Bond of each youth was fixed at $500.

The trio was being held at Police Headquarters Thursday in default of bail.

Unable to open the safe, the three youths had moved their heavy burden almost to the bottom of a stairway when they encountered two patrolmen. The officers assisted the boys in lifting the safe into a waiting automobile and it was taken to Police Headquarters. So were two of the boys. The third escaped but was later arrested at his home.

Questioned by police, the youths denied, however, being implicated in a series of robberies reported over the week end.

EDUCATION SYSTEM CHANGE IS SPEAKER

Mrs. Marietta Johnson, director of the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala., will address the student body of Antioch College at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening.

Mrs. Johnson has gained national recognition for her educational experimentation at Fairhope, and has also become known through a recent book describing her methods, "Youth in a World of Men." She has abolished the giving of marks, and grading systems such as are a feature of practically all school systems, and her work has been praised by progressive educators in many sections. It is expected that she will describe this in her address at Antioch.

Professor John Dewey, of Columbia University, following an investigation into the Fairhope methods, reported that in his judgment "the school has demonstrated that it is possible for children to lead the same natural lives in school that they lead in homes of the right sort outside of school; to progress bodily, mentally and morally in school without factitious pressure, rewards, examinations, grades, or promotions; while they acquire control of the conventional tools of learning and of the study of books."

Mrs. Johnson will also speak at the Antioch vesper service at 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

Jack Kraft, above, former New York fencing master, was shot and his body thrown from a steamer into the Mississippi River, recovery of his body disclosed. Miss Ione Ord, New York, held by police, is said to have named the slayer, whose identity is being kept secret.

COTTAGES OWNED BY XENIANS ARE SAFE

Summer cottages owned by Xenians at Lakeside, O., near Toledo, are believed to have not been endangered by fire which swept the winter colony at the resort last Sunday, destroying twenty-seven unoccupied cottages and causing damage estimated at $100,000. Cottages belonging to H. S. LeSourd, W. Market St., and to the estate of the late Leila K. Harley were not situated in the area covered by the blaze, it is thought by the owners.

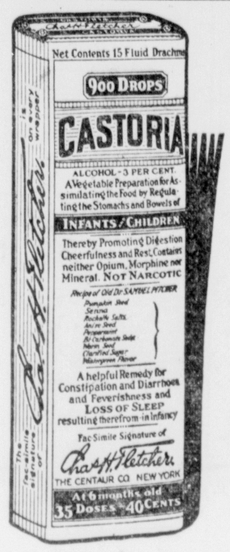
An Ailing CHILD



Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

Your car will be worth more next year if it's an Eight!

You're out-of-date without an EIGHT!

On every hand you hear people talking Eights. And what is more convincing, you see them buying Eights.

In 43 states, * for the first seven months of this year, new car registrations above $1000 showed a 94 per cent increase in Eights—an 18 per cent decrease in Sixes. (Five states do not compile registrations by engine types.)

Every fine car in America is an Eight. In fact, 41 per cent of all makes of cars today are Eights. Is it any wonder that thousands intending to buy new Sixes are hesitating?

What is a Six going to bring in next year's trade-in markets? How can it possibly measure up in value with an Eight? Those are the questions that every thinking motorist is asking himself.

For, right now, at the price of a Six, you can buy a brilliant new Studebaker Eight. A champion Studebaker Eight with all the extra power, extra smoothness, extra flexibility and extra value that only an Eight can give.

An Eight built by Studebaker, now enjoying its 77th successful year—now the largest producer of Eight cylinder cars in the world. An Eight by Studebaker, holder of 11 world records of speed and endurance and more American stock car records than all other cars combined.

Choose an Eight from the three great Studebaker lines of Eights now available at new low One-Profit prices. Your car will be worth more a year from now if it's an Eight!

Baby Recovers Hearing When "Grandad" Dies

Scoffers may jeer at miracles and direct answer to prayer, but the Pannone family of Brooklyn, N. Y., reverently exhibited their four-year-old son, Michael, as having been restored to health by a death-bed miracle.

The boy's eyesight is clearing, his power of speech has returned, and his hearing has been restored the family avers, as the result of a prayer by the boy's dying grandfather, Vincent.

Ten months ago, following the death of his mother, Michael was stricken with spinal meningitis, which cost him his sight, hearing and speech. Physicians declared the malady incurable—that he would never be anything but a mute cripple. On September 29 the boy's grandfather lay dying. He prayed devoutly to the "Blessed Virgin" to take away his own speech, sight and hearing and restore those of his grandson. Then he died.

Then, members of the family say, occurred the miracle. Within ten minutes of his grandfather's death the child recovered his voice. Within a short time his hearing was improved, while his vision which had been completely blurred, showed marked improvement.

Since that time the boy's physical progress has baffled the doctors.

HERE IS THE BATTLE OF THE HEMLINE PICTORIALLY TOLD

This array of fashion portraits tells the story of what has been happening during the past year to milady's skirts. The young lady at the extreme left wears a modish costume with the fashionable knee-length skirts of yesterday, then comes the below-the-knee hemline. Up to this time the scanty skirts have striven desperately to hold their own, but, as we continue to the right, they give up the struggle, steadily descending until at the very end of our pictorial story they sweep the floor.

HERE'S FAMED MUSICIAN

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. "—With a flip of the hand—and a flick of short, stubby fingers, B. A. Rolfe, dance band conductor, conjures up a million little jazz demons. And he looks as though he were picking them right out of the air.

He has a fat little tummy—like Santa Claus. Looks as though he belonged with his hands placidly folded over it—beaming on the world benignly. But, B. A. is much too busy. He always has AN IDEA.

Innovations in Jazz

That is what has helped to make the orchestra he conducts one of the most celebrated on the air. The jovial Rolfe has introduced jews harps, saws, small boys' whistles—almost any amusing little innovation that helps to make noise—into his band.

Hailing from Brasher Falls, N. Y., Rolfe was born October 24, 1879. When a lad in high school he was such a trumpet prodigy that he toured Europe and tooted his way to fame.

This is an idea the conductor has had in mind ever since the youthful crime wave has swept the country. It seems sane and sound—and is well worth setting down as food for thought.

"I believe," he said earnestly, after his orchestra was through broadcasting one night recently, "the tendency of the small boy to show off before the world has a lot to do with the large number of lads who are staging hold-ups and murders for thrills. It seems to me if they had something else to occupy their minds they would be a great deal better off.

An Ounce of Prevention

"Nearly all of these youngsters are wild about jazz music. If conductors took a group and organized them into orchestras, taught them the violin, the saxophone and the different instruments that attract them, it would keep the boys busy and bring them together in a whole some club idea. I believe it would not be long before it would be noticed that they were staying off the streets and keeping out of trouble. These lads have no wholesome or interesting way to entertain themselves."

So much interested is Rolfe in the modern boy that he is trying now to get a group of New Yorkers interested in the lads who have nothing but the street for their playground, and finding some way to buy instruments and start them off musically.

Perhaps if you take up this idea in your home town right away it may save the windows and the new car from the attention of the little rascals on Hallowe'en.

George Cassidy, of New York, son of the veteran starter, Mars Cassidy, who died recently, pictured in the starter's box at the Empire City track, New York, as he fills his father's place in accordance with a promise made to the elder Cassidy when he was dying. It was Mars Cassidy's last wish that his son should "carry on" with his father's work and George Cassidy kept his word.

When is An Indian, American? Passport Bureau May Solve It

By KENNETH GEORGE
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

Is an Indian an American? He no doubt is sure of his Americanism until he wanders off the reservation into a passport bureau with no other evidence of his American birth, than his Indian appearance. Facts not features interest the passport bureau, however.

Jackson Barnett, of the Osage tribe and reputed to be the wealthiest Indian in the United States, is at present in Los Angeles, faced with the job of obtaining documentary or substantiating evidence to authenticate his Americanism. For years he has desired to make a tour of Europe, and he had everything ready but the trifling matter of his passport—something that he most likely thought rather ironic for an Indian anyway.

With a bewildered expression on his typical Indian countenance, Barnett has been watching people less than ten years in this country, produce their naturalization papers and receive their passports. He just could not believe that further evidence of his birth in this country would be required than just his say so. But he has been told that he must conform to the rules of the Department, before he could receive his passport.

Barnett's wife, the former Anna Laura Lowe is with him, and is assisting him in collecting the necessary proof that he is officially a member of Uncle Sam's family. He has always believed that he was born in Oklahoma, but if he doesn't soon receive his passport, he'll begin to doubt that he was born at all. The Redskin isn't used to red tape.

COME UP BEFORE VOTERS AGAIN

Voters of Greene County on general election day November 5 will pass upon the question of continuing the county road levy of two mills for another five years.

This levy has been in effect in this county for a number of years and has created funds with which county road officials have carried forward road improvements.

Continuance of road work will depend upon favorable action by the votes on the proposed levy, according to road officials.

If carried, the levy would produce in Greene County approximately $112,000 a year, whereas if the levy should fail, road funds would be reduced in that amount, it is pointed out.

From an investigation of the funds accruing to the county for road building purposes from gasoline tax and motor vehicle fees, an insufficient amount would come from this source to permit a county-wide road program of any size, it is asserted. In other words, it is explained, the county would not even be able to meet township trustees dollar for dollar in building local roads.

Only that part of the gasoline tax which is apportioned to townships and the counties' part of 5 per cent of the second two-cent gasoline tax apportioned to the counties, are available for road building. The greater part of the gasoline taxes and motor vehicle fees accruingto any county must be used for road maintenance and repair work.

Among the several points emphasized by road officials in urging favorable action on the road levy on election day is the fact this is not a new levy and that it does not mean an increase in taxes but a continuance of the levy that has been paid for a number of years, and also that continuance of road work in Greene County depends upon renewal of this road levy.

ACCUSED OF MURDER OF HIS CHILD BRIDE

GREENUP, Ky., Oct. 24.—Wiley Childers, 27, of Ashland, Ky., is being held in jail without bond here today on a charge of slaying his 18-year-old bride, Virginia, following a preliminary hearing here yesterday.

Bond was denied by Judge R. T. Parsons, after Mrs. Childers' father, Maryland Potter, a tall mountaineer, told the court he saw Childers shoot and kill his daughter.

Potter admitted firing four shots at Childers, after, he said, the man had shot and killed his wife.

Childers denied that he had fired a single shot. He quarreled with his wife, he declared, and she had gone to her parent's home. He related that he had followed her to attempt a reconciliation and that she was standing on the running board of his automobile when he heard the shots. She dropped off and he fled after being wounded in the hand, according to his own story.

The father of the girl-bride said he fired to "stop Childers."

CHURCHES WILL HOLD UNION MEETING

Each church is asked to take part in the program of the day and a large delegation is expected. A banner will be given the largest delegation. Eleazer Church now holds the banner.

Superintendents of each church are asked to figure the per cent of gain in attendance during the months of June, July and August.

LOTS OF TURKEY

THERE will be plenty of turkey for Thanksgiving Day. Although turkeys are considered difficult to raise, William Rife, farmer, living near Clifton, has a flock of nearly 1,000 turkeys, the largest in Greene County, ready to grace tables on Turkey Day. It is Rife's third yearly venture into the turkey raising field, his secret of success being the segregation of the turks from chickens. Chickens spread a disease that while fatal to turkeys are harmless to themselves, it is said.

"BACK TO WORK THANKS TO THIS NEW KONJOLA"

Lady Enthusiastic Over Quick Results That Modern Medicine Gave.

"Konjola was certainly kind to me; my one regret is that I did not know of this medicine sooner", said Mrs. Margaret Chure, 5708 Bridge Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

MRS. MARGARET CHURE

"I had back ache and rheumatism so bad that I was unable to work. Week after week passed and though I tried many medicines and treatments I derived no benefit from them.

"I read and heard a great deal about Konjola and made up my mind to try it. Just like I was told it would do, Konjola made its powers felt at once. My organs were cleansed and stimulated, and as their functioning became more normal, the pains grew less and less. In three weeks I was free from pain and back to work, thanks to this new medicine".

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Seventy Years Young!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE scorns that ancient prejudice which harshly dictated that age was a limiting factor of usefulness. To-day, old age not only commands respect but demands its place in every walk of life.*

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

TUNE IN—The Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra, every Saturday night, over a coast-to-coast network of the N. B. C.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

FIRST GUILD PLAY WILL BE OFFERED HERE NOVEMBER 8

Friday night, November 8, announced as the date for "Tea for Three" the opening production of The Little Theater Guild of Xenia for the season of 1929-30, at City Hall Theater.

Rehearsals are being held several evenings each week under the direction of Mrs. Esther Smith Schick, whose capable direction contributed to the success of the Guild's first season.

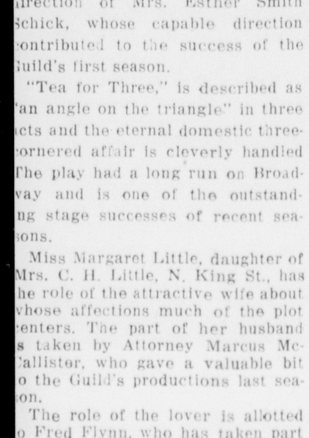
"Tea for Three," is described as "an angle on the triangle" in three acts and the eternal domestic three-cornered affair is cleverly handled The play had a long run on Broadway and is one of the outstanding stage successes of recent seasons.

Miss Margaret Little, daughter of Mrs. C. H. Little, N. King St., has the role of the attractive wife about whose affections much of the plot centers. The part of her husband is taken by Attorney Marcus McCallister, who gave a valuable bit to the Guild's productions last season.

The role of the lover is allotted to Fred Flynn, who has taken part in a number of other home-talent plays. Miss Helen Spahr as the maid and Bob Ellis, both newcomers to the Guild player list, the latter in the part of the butler are the remaining members of the cast.

The ticket campaign of the Guild for this season is now in full swing and tickets may be obtained from members of the executive and membership committees or at the Probate Court offices or D. D. Jones' Drug Store.

Crack Coast Pilot



Betty Russell, seventeen-year-old San Francisco flying marvel, considered one of the best airplane pilots in the West. Betty has just received her license as a private pilot after passing with exceptionally high marks the stiff flying and written examinations of the Department of Commerce. She has had more than thirty hours of soloing to date and she is ambitious to get her license as a commercial pilot. To do this she must have had fifty solo hours. Betty gets up at 4:30 every morning to be down at the Curtiss Flying School at Beresford, on the San Francisco Peninsula, by 7 A. M. She flies two hours and then returns to San Francisco to be in Polytechnic High School by 10:30. She expects to graduate from Poly next Christmas and will take up aviation as her life work

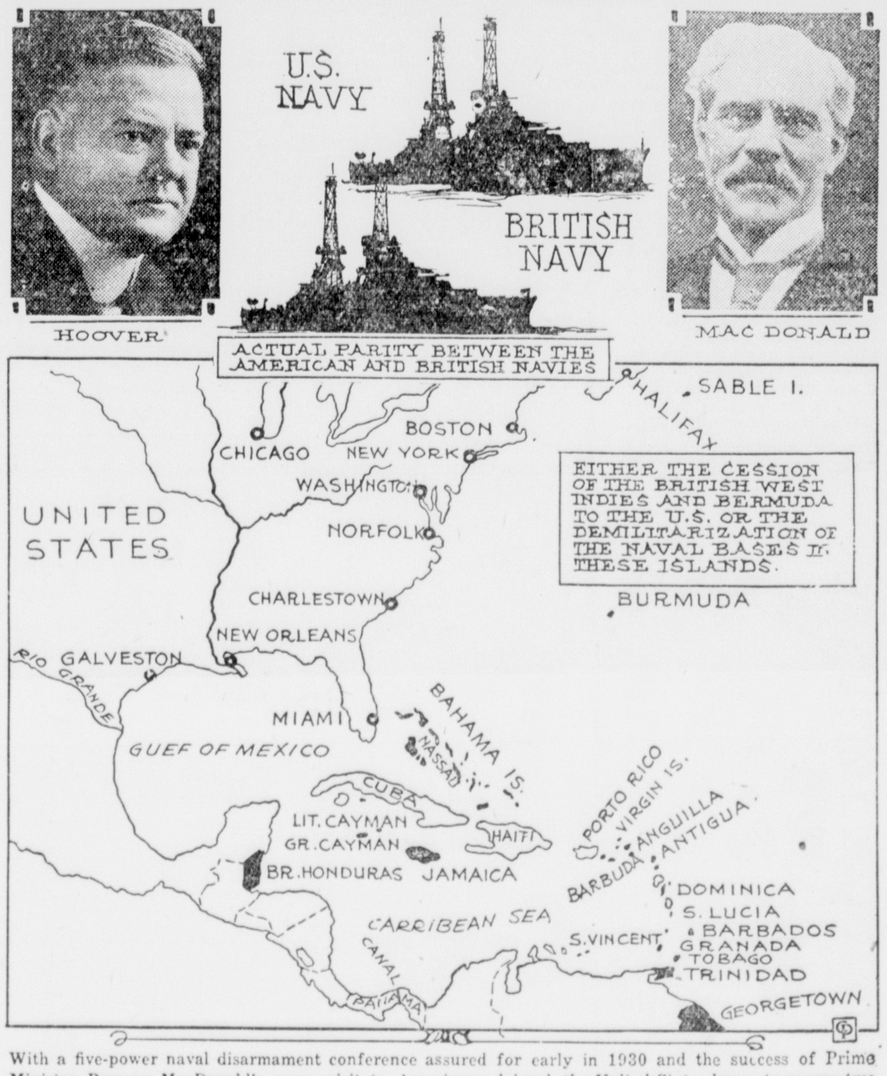
WHAT U. S. HOPES NAVAL CONFERENCE WILL BRING



With a five-power naval disarmament conference assured for early in 1930 and the success of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's peace visit to America acclaimed, the United States hopes to secure two concessions from Great Britain when representatives of the powers gather to talk disarmament again. The first, absolute naval parity, was conceded by the British prime minister in his various public utterances while in the United States. The second is the demilitarization of the British naval bases which are within striking distance of the east coast of America. Map above shows the strategic situation of these bases, which would make the British war vessels doubly effective in time of war. Insets are of MacDonald and President Hoover.

"MY TRUE-LOVE HATH MY HEART"
(From the "Arcadia") ©

MY true-love hath my heart and I have his,
By just exchange one for the other given:
I hold his dear, and mine he cannot miss;
There never was a better bargain driven:
His heart in me keeps him and me in one,
My heart in him his thoughts and senses guides:
He loves my heart, for once it was his own,
I cherish his, because in me it bides.

His heart his wound received from my sight;
My heart was wounded from his wounded heart;
For as from me, on him his hurt did light,
So still me thought in me his heart did smart:
Both equal hurt, in his change sought our bliss,
My true love hath my heart, and I have his.

Edda Mussolini

El Ferrol, Spain, prides itself on being quick to note the visiting Signorina Edda Mussolini's resemblance to her fiery father. But its some 30,000 inhabitants are today pointing with still greater pride to the fact that they agree with Il Duce's daughter in her somewhat dictatorial stand on Spain's national sport—the bull fight.

While at this Galician coastal town, Signorina Mussolini characterized the bull fight as "cruel, bloody and repugnant." She much prefers football. A local paper published all she had to say on the matter, at the same time calling attention to the fact that El Ferrol is a modern Spanish town without a bull ring.

On almost the same day the Mayor of Navalmoral, a neighboring town, announced the arena is to be abolished and the money hitherto spent on the bull fight is to be used in building a school.

Edda declared:

"I am sure that in Spain you do not understand how far the bullfight lowers your national standard in the eyes of the rest of Europe.

"It is true that we foreign visitors seldom leave without having seen a fight, giving way as we do to a morbid desire for excitement for much the same reason that we would attend an auto-da-fe or a public execution, if there were any. Still, when we come away from such spectacles we feel the moral degradation which follows upon a deed of which we are ashamed."

Neither boxing nor football can be compared with the bullfight. In this respect she said:

"Boxing may be brutal, but a blow more or less is neither here nor there. In Spain and Italy the knife claims far more victims than the fist, and in the most civilized countries men still have recourse to knives and blows when angered."

Apparently somewhat taken aback by her own eloquence, the signorina added:

"Oh, I know Spain cannot be judged by an hereditary blot, which will certainly disappear."

The World And All

CROWS

Who knows anything about crows? Is it true that a crow lives more than a hundred years if he has good luck, and that he seldom has bad luck? Are crows as wise as they are generally credited with being?

I know that farmers generally credit crows with much cunning. It is a common belief among farmers in Kansas, where I was reared, that a flock of crows will remain in the trees, cawing at you, if you carry no gun, but that the flock will take flight if anyone carrying a gun approaches.

As a boy, I used to try to determine whether this was true. We had a large grove of locust trees, less than a quarter of a mile from our house, and there were some tall cottonwoods skirting the grove. Crows used to perch on these trees by thousands at a time. I would stroll down to the grove while the crow congress was cawing its loudest, and create not a ripple in the loud discussion. I would throw clods at the cawers, and the only result would be a little flapping of wings and some more loud talk from the tree-tops.

Then I would go back to the house and get a shotgun. As I approached the grove the crows flew away, high in air and traveling fast.

At least, it was my belief that this was what happened. Since I have moved to the city, far from the crows, I have often thought that I may have been mistaken.

Recently I was talking to Miss Garnett Burks, of Washington, D. C., who has a pet crow. She got him on her father's farm in Virginia, four years ago, when he was just a fluffy chick, newly hatched. A tree in which there was a crow's nest had been chopped down, and Miss Burks decided to save the three little crowlets that were in the nest. Two died when someone fed them live angle worms.

Miss Burks says her pet is very intelligent. He is very fond of a cat who lives in the same house with him, and often plays tricks on the cat, pulling his tail and otherwise teasing him.

When the young crow was threatened with rickets, his mistress brought him out of it by feeding him cod liver oil and massaging him regularly.

"Oh, he's been a great care," she says, "but he has more than repaid me for my trouble. He's so intelligent. When I leave Washington for a time, I leave him at the zoo, where he is well cared for without charge. He is learning to talk from an Australian crow with whom he lives at the zoo."

I think crows must be interesting. Does any of my readers know anthing about crows that might be interesting to the rest of us?

FALL BRIBERY CASE RECEIVED BY JURY THURSDAY MORNING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The jury received the Fall bribery case at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Following a lengthy charge from Justice William Hitz, which indicated to them clearly they should not allow their sympathies for the broken and ill defendant to sway their judgment, the four women and eight men retired to decide whether the $100,000 former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall got from E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, was a bribe or a loan.

Hitz warned the jurors against holding a "reasonable doubt" on the basis of anything devised by "ingenuity of counsel."

Referring indirectly to the fact Fall is a sick man, the judge indicated that the temperance of justice with mercy was up to him and not the jury.

'And after all," said Hitz, "The question is what was in the mind of the man."

The judge called the jury's attention to the fact that Fall had lied to the senate about where he got the $100,000.

"One of his counsel," observed Hitz, "called this 'unfortunate' another one called it 'a lie that was justified.'"

Continuing his charge, the judge said: "Counsel has asked you to 'send this defendant back to the sunshine of New Mexico.' You have nothing to do with the sunshine of New Mexico."

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The senior Hallowe'en frolic that was held last Friday night in the Central High School gymnasium proved to be quite an affair.

The party was not to be a masquerade affair but quite a number of the students came dressed in Hallowe'en attire. It was a real Hallowe'en frolic all right and everyone enjoyed it.

The party began at eight and continued until eleven. The Rhodes Orchestra from Wilberforce that was scheduled to furnish the music notified those in charge at the last minute that they would not be able to appear. A popular Xenia orchestra was engaged at once and the dancing was carried on without a flaw.

The crowd was not quite as large as was expected but nevertheless the seniors felt quite proud of themselves.

This was the first function of the school year and the rest should be quite well attended. The next party will be a pre-Christmas party to be sponsored by the juniors on the night of December 6th, 1929.

The senior girls held a market last Saturday at the former location of Geyer's book store. They realized quite a neat sum from the sale as well as experience in salesmanship and baking. They cleared about nineteen dollars, which they expect to put in the "annual" fund.

The sophomores will hold their last candy sale in the hall, for a month, Friday. The seniors will sell the candy for the next month and then the sophomores will have another month. The freshmen class has not yet organized and vided between the seniors and the sophomores for the first few months.

The Hi-Y Club held a sandwich sale at 2:45 Tuesday afternoon and had a complete "sell out". They cleared about $2.50 from the sales. All hall sales this year are being conducted under the "five cent" plan. All candy, sandwiches and Eskimo pies are selling at five cents this year in order to enable the students to be able to patronize the different classes and clubs more frequently.

The first picture show of the school year will be given Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the auditorium. The title of the show is "Prep and Pep" and is given by the senior class for the small sum of twenty-five cents. All students are looking forward to the show and a full house is expected.

The next show will be given by plans are being laid to see if they cannot outdo the seniors.

Miss Olive Allen, English teacher, who was operated on for appendicitis at Christ Hospital Cincinnati last week is doing very nicely and expects to be back to her work within a few weeks.

The "Review" will be issued Thursday at 2:30. There are to be quite a few new features this week and everyone is anxious for the edition to be put on sale.

Radio programs are being given daily to the students of Central High by means of the new radio which is located in the cafeteria. Pupils are permitted to attend the sessions from 2 to 2:45 each afternoon who do not have classes at that time. Lessons in French, from station WLW at Cincinnati.

Quite a few different clubs and organizations have been holding wiener roasts this fall. It has been an ideal fall for the evening affairs so far and everyone seems anxious to get out in the open at night for a little exercise and refreshments. God bless the fellow that catches a cold!

Mr. William Hugh Miller, director of music in the city schools, and director of the glee clubs of Central High has been working his cast at rapid pace in order to get them in trim shape for the operetta "In Old Louisiana" to be given the night of November 1 at 8 o'clock in the Jean B. Elwell auditorium. With the date less than two weeks away practice is being held every night at 7:00 p. m. Costumes have been purchased and the scenery is being arranged. All indications and reports point to the singers from Central.

Tickets were issued Wednesday and the regular price of fifty cents for lower floor and thirty-five cents for balcony seats will prevail. Reserved seats may be gotten at Sohn's after 12 noon, of October 31.

The debate team to represent Central this year has not yet been chosen by Mr. W. C. Boyce, head of the English department. He is awaiting the arrival of further information on the subject.

It was announced recently that Central would have a debate team to compete with other teams in the nearby vicinity and also in the state matches to be held later on. The announcement met with the approval of several of the students and they are anxious to get started. Under the supervision of Mr. Boyce, Central should put forth a good team this year.

what not. He lost two games last week (Withrow and Muskingum) and on his return trip home Sunday received a shoulder injury that is bothering him quite a good deal. Rain has prevented any practice to get the boys out Wednesday night rain or shine and set them through a "rapid fire" drill. Only a few changes in the lineup this week are anticipated and the plays are expected to be worked out.

"My! you look lovely to-night"

SHE knew the compliment to be true—for the last pimple had vanished.

If you are one of the embarrassed—and men are not exceptions—with skin blemishes that linger, and sometimes leave scars, you must realize that the logical cause may come from the blood.

A clear, smooth, velvety skin bespeaks loveliness. Men admire it. Women praise and secretly envy. Hope, joy, happiness, and even love, may depend on the possession of a clear, unblemished skin.

On the other hand—skin eruptions are outward evidences of the condition within. Authorities state it is an indication that the body's power of resistance to disease and infection is low. Meaning, that there is a deficiency of red - blood - cells.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and you sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to diseases.

S.S.S. is Nature's own tonic for improving the appetite, building strength, and clearing the body of so-called skin troubles, by increasing the red-cells of the blood.

S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has stood the test of over 100 years.

All Drug Stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

PLENTY OF VARIETY AT CHURCH SALE

WHAT do you think they're going to auction off at the community sale to be conducted Saturday by the Clifton Presbyterian Church on the church grounds?

Everything from livestock to fence posts, from autos to horses, from church sheds to coffee. And it all will be done in a business-like manner by six auctioneers who have volunteered their services.

The church asked for donations for the sale and the responses it received were more than generous. As a result automobiles, horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, corn, wheat, oats, cakes, locust fence posts, church sheds and from 200 to 250 articles donated by various merchants will be placed on the block and knocked down to the highest bidder.

Merchants from Xenia, Yellow Springs, Springfield, Jamestown, Cedarville, South Charleston, London, Osborn, Selma and Clifton opened up their hearts to the solicitors, and gave all kinds and descriptions of merchandisable articles.

Six auctioneers will keep the bidding lively. They are: Col. George Wallace, Springfield; Col. Lamar Titus, South Solon; Col. Guy Currie, South Charleston; Col. Carl Taylor, Jamestown; Col. Lewis Mead, Springfield and Col. Swartzbaugh, Springfield.

The sale starts at 10 a. m. and continues until all articles are sold, which is expected to be before dark. Women of the church will serve luncheon in the church at noon. While the sale is scheduled for the church grounds, it will be held under cover if rain occurs.

Mrs. Anna Bryan Ayres, of New Haven, Conn., an advertising expert who earned a salary of $100,000 a year, was found shot to death, beside the dead body of William Gaylord, a bookkeeper, in an inn at Wallingford, Conn. Police believe Gaylord, who was married, first shot Mrs. Ayres and then committed suicide. Mrs. Ayres was 41 years old and the divorced wife of Ernest Ayres, former Amherst College professor. She was the mother of three children. Gaylord was 46 years old, and, believed, had planned to divorce his wife and marry Mrs. Ayres.

Before Baby Comes

Mother's Friend lessens pain

The muscles, tissues and nerves must "give" easily as the abdomen enlarges or much pain and suffering may result. More important still, is to have the tissues and muscles as "elastic" as possible when the great moment of childbirth arrives.

Countless thousands of expectant mothers for over 60 years have been relieved by the use of "Mother's Friend"—that time-tested, scientifically-prepared skin lubricant and pain-reliever which originated in the prescription of an eminent obstetrician.

You owe yourself the comfort "Mother's Friend" gives. It is soothing and relaxing. It is used externally only—gently rubbed into the skin. Clean and pleasant to the touch. Brings relief promptly. Very valuable in keeping the breasts in good condition. Also puts you in fine shape for the approaching ordeal. "Mother's Friend" is on sale at all drug stores. $1.25 per bottle. Try a massage with it tonight and notice the ease and comfort it gives. A booklet on "Things to Know Before Baby Comes" will be mailed in plain envelope, free, on request. Address Bradfield Regulator Co., Dept. 15, Atlanta, Ga.

Accept these gifts with our compliments

DO YOU think of your newspaper merely as a means of finding out what the famous people in the world are doing, saying, thinking? As an impersonal record of events which do not concern you at all? We have something more than that to offer you. For instance:

Please accept today with our compliments these things, which you'll find in our pages: New and better ways of performing old household tasks . . . means of saving steps, time, effort . . . labor-saving devices . . . short-cuts to efficiency . . . money-saving. "Why," you say, "you're probably talking about the advertisements!" Just so — we are.

Think of the advertisements-- and read them--as news. News of the world of good things . . . news of scientific achievement accomplished for your benefit . . . news that concerns you far more directly than an account of boundary disputes in Baluchistan can ever concern you.

Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to save you time, effort, money, trouble, when it comes to buying the things that make life a little easier. . . a little brighter. Reading the advertisements will keep you in step with the rapidly advancing standard of living in America today.

Every day there's something new in the advertisements as well as on the front page. Be informed on all sides!

FROM EVERYWHERE

A NEWSPAPER in Constantinople daily publishes photographs, names and addresses of its subscribers, and I think it's a fine American idea, even if it did originate in Turkey. On the other hand a Kansas City man is killed by his wife, right before company, when the two disagree over the way to play a bridge game. Which reminds me that alcoholic psychosis, in case you are interested, is another name for delirium tremens, D T's or what the Omaha police used to call "snakes." And New York is to have a building 150 stories high, covering two blocks at the base and rising 1,600 feet above the sidewalk.

ONE of the most interesting libraries in the world is the William L. Clements library, on the campus of the University of Michigan. A wealthy manufacturer donated the building and all the books and manuscripts comprising thousands of the most valuable items of Americana. Flogging and hanging up by the thumbs are still common practices in American prisons, and when convicts revolt they know they are going in for mass suicide, but most of them would rather be dead than alive.

A devilfish is harmless unless disturbed or attacked, and there are almost no animals that are more harmful upon less provocation than the common housefly and certain kinds of mosquitos. I bought in Spain two pieces-of-eight that were taken from the wreck of an old galleon off the coast of Peru within the last year. And it interests me much to note that the smart aleck custom of beating and torturing freshmen is getting a grand setback at some of our best colleges this season.

READ THIS FIRST:

It is the last day of high school in Rendale, and Rosalie March, seventeen, the prettiest girl in the graduating class, is a saucy little angel in her first really pretty dress. There is a senior dance, and for the first time, she is realizing an old dream and dancing with the class president, Neil McKinley, the richest boy in town.

Later her head is in a whirl when he sneaks away for a little while and takes Rosalie for a ride in his shiny roadster. He has come to the party with Mary Cunningham. He kisses Rosalie and calls her "his new little sweetheart." When they return, Mary, white with fury, creates a scene that sends Rosalie home in tears, her party ruined.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

Rosalie awakened the next morning with her head in a whirl. She sat up in bed and her mouth was dry and hot.

When she looked in the mirror she saw that she was very pale and her eyes were dull and dark circled. She dressed and went down stairs.

Her mother was frying eggs for breakfast when Rosalie walked slowly, weakly into the kitchen.

"Mother, I must have eaten something yesterday that wasn't good for me. I feel weak as a kitten—and my mouth tastes so funny."

"I certainly don't want anything to eat."

Then Mrs. March was really worried. Rosalie had always had a good appetite.

"Maybe you stayed out too late, Rosie. What time did you get home?"

"Ah, it was just a little after ten. It couldn't have been that."

"What did you and Sybil do?"

"We—we listened to music."

She turned and went out to the porch before her mother could ask any more questions. Mrs. March, assuming the girls had listened to the radio, forgot the matter entirely.

It was just then that Neil came out of his front door. He crossed the street.

"Gee, Rosalie, I'm awful sorry Mary acted so crazy last night. She was tight."

"Tight!" Rosalie's eyes opened wide. "Do you mean to tell me Mary Cunningham would get drunk."

"Oh, I just don't know what's the matter with me. I felt so funny coming home last night—and I just don't remember anything after I got in the house. I must have been awfully sick. This morning I am dizzy, and I can't stand the sight of breakfast. Maybe it was that lemonade with the bitter stuff in it. I didn't think of that."

Neil felt just a little bit ashamed of himself. Rosalie did look very sick. Good gravy! Was there any girl of seventeen such a babe in arms? Not knowing what she was drinking. Didn't even suspect that he had given her gin cocktails.

Roisalie couldn't bring herself to drop the subject of Mary. A little later she said primly:

"I don't see how you could associate with drunken women, Neil McKinley! What would your mother say?"

"Mother always serves highballs and cocktails when she has guests," he smiled at Rosalie and watched her surprised face with amusement.

"Neil! Your mother wouldn't drink that awful stuff." Rosalie looked across at the McKinley house as though it were some kind of monster.

He threw back his head and laughed.

"You baby! Don't you ever read books that teach you anything about how civilized people live?"

Rosalie was on the defensive in a minute.

"Oh, so my mother and I are not civilized because we don't get drunk and call people bad names and stay out all night—and make—make bums out of ourselves."

He reached over and shook her arm.

"Now, don't get mad, Innocence, just because I kid you a little. If you do I won't take you out for a ride tonight."

Rosalie turned away.

"I'm not sure that I want to go—after I see the kind of women you seem to prefer!"

Neil's manner changed, and he begged earnestly:

"Don't be like that, booful. We have to get acquainted all over again. Didn't I say you were my new sweetheart?"

She studied a minute, then one dimple came into play.

"All right. If you promise to give Mary the gate—and not feed me any more of that terrible lemonade. Didn't it hurt you?"

Neil smiled broadly.

"Not a bit. And I'll make a bottle baby out of you yet."

She watched him swing down the street with a singing heart. He was the best looking, best dressed and richest boy in Rendale, and he was going to be her boy friend. It hardly seemed true, after all these years, that Neil McKinley would be back sitting on the March porch, and there would be such lovely rides in the moonlight.

When Rosalie looked over her wardrobe later her heart sank. Of course she couldn't wear the graduation dress. She came downstairs with a long face.

"Mummy, I've simply got to go to work and earn some new clothes. I'm in rags!"

Mrs. March turned white. Rosalie was shocked at the pain she had caused. She ran to her mother and kissed her.

"Darling—don't, please—don't be didn't. I just mean I'm through high didn't. I just mean I'mthrough high school now—and that I can earn some money."

Mrs. March sank into a chair weakly.

"My little Rosie. You aren't old enough to go out in the world yet. I couldn't let you. You don't know how to do a thing. And the world is wicked—Rosalie. A dreadful, sinful place. I know."

Rosalie smiled at her maternally, and sat on the edge of her chair.

"Silly little Elizabeth! I'm no baby any more. I'm going to go out and work—and I'll make good and I'll buy you swell clothes and you can walk down Main Street and all the boys will think you're Rosalie March's little sister."

Tears came to Mrs. March's eyes, and she sat back wearily. She felt tired and old and useless and a failure. Rosalie was a young lady now. There would be boys, too. Neil McKinley had suddenly sat up and taken notice. Others would follow.

Rosalie washed the dinner dishes and made her mother sit in the porch swing and rest. When Neil came across the street, whistling, she talked with him a few minutes before Rosalie came out in a cheap little flowered voile.

They turned and waved as they drove away—and Rosalie threw her mother a kiss. Elizabeth March got up slowly and walked into the house.

MICHIGAN GOES UP IN THE AIR

A lot of football strategy went up in the air when Fielding H. Yost veteran University of Michigan director of athletics, and Harry Kipke, gridiron star of several years ago, now head football coach took a ride over Ann Arbor, in the tiny blimp "Puritan."

The Theater

Is the American legitimate theater dead? Did the talkies in the future of the theater here? The answer to both of these is no, and the answer comes from New York, where the customarily brilliant amusement season is swinging into being.

Broadway itself, with few exceptions, is devoted to the talking picture but on both sides of "Hooey Hollow", the side-street legitimate theaters from 42nd St. up to the 60's, are offering the cream of the world's stage entertainment, garnered from every country where there are playwrights.

Xenians and others from the so-called Bible Belt, intent on getting to Gotham during the footlight era, need worry none about the inroads of the out-louds, because they will find the producers still holding out at the old-stands, developing new talent to replace those weaned away by Hollywood and still offering first-class entertainment.

The major successes of the infant season are American, as witness "June Moon" by Ring Lardner and George S. Kauffman; David Belasco's production of "It's a Wise Child" and George M. Cohan's "Gambling"—all typically American.

"Strictly Dishonorable" by Preston Sturges, another smash comedy, likewise is of the American scene—just as is Elmer Rice's "Street Scene" of last year, which is still running, as popular as ever, and which captured the Pulitzer prize last year.

Another success is "The Channel Road", the first playwriting attempt of the veteran critic Alexander Woollcott, collaborating with that man of successes, George S. Kauffman, who is dramatic editor the the Times. Rice has a second play this year, "See Naples and Die", a quite different comedy, George Kelly of "Showoff" fame, has his first play in two years: "Maggie the Magnificent".

Successes continuing from last year include two English importations, "Journey's End", a war story and John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand". Likewise there is the American "Let Us Be Gay" with Francine Larrimore.

Jane Cowl is drawing to "Jenny", Gertrude Lawrence to "Candle Light" and Elsie Ferguson to "Scarlet Pages". "The Criminal Code", which rips our system of justice up the back, is attracting attention. "Many Waters" with Ernest Truex, just back from London, is getting the "carriage trade". "Subway Express", with a dead man the chief character, is leading the mystery plays.

Topping the musicals are "Whoopee", holdover, with Eddie Cantor; "Sweet Adeline", with Helen Morgan; "George White's "Scandals", with Georgie making a personal appearance; "Sketch Book", "Follow Thru", "The Little Show", "The New Moon" (another from last year) and "The Street Singer". And, of course, the revival of Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste" with the original Fritzi Scheff.

Of course openings are numerous—and closings, also. Soon to open is "Bitter Sweet", imported from abroad by Florenz Ziegfeld and Arch Selwyn. Included in the good things is Eva La Gallinne's Civic Repertory Co., down on 14th St., which is now playing Tchekov's "The Sea Gull".

The Theater Guild began the season with "Karl and Anna" from the German, which didn't go so well, but has several morsels ready, including "The Apple Cart", which is George Bernard Shaw's latest, poking fun at democracy and plutocrats.

Despite the destruction of the Waldorf-Astoria and the Majestic Hotels, there are even more hotel rooms for the visitor than last year. The new hotels, all giants, include The Lexington, the Delmonico, the Governor Clinton and, soon to be ready, the New Yorker, of which Ralph Hitz, former manager of the Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, is manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beal, near Goes, would be very much gratified if the owners of the three brown and white spotted bird dogs would call at their home and take away the animals, which have refused to leave.

Th Xenia balloonists, Chas. Weaver and William Grottendick, are now soaring far above the clouds on their first aerial voyage. They got off from Buck Island in Dayton with a party of seven people in the big balloon, "Hoosier".

MATCH KING RISING TO POWER AS FINANCIAL GENIUS LENDS MILLIONS TO GOVERNMENTS

By ALEXANDER C. HERMAN
Central Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 24. —Ivar Kreuger, described as the year's outstanding financial genius and world's richest bachelor, has just granted this, his first interview with an American newspaperman since he became northern Europe's "biggest story."

This man, who a little more than twenty years ago was driving piles on odd construction jobs in America, just has completed an important link in his creation of the world's largest monopoly. He has gained control of almost all the wood pulp of his country, thus assuring his match companies — operating in thirty-five lands and employing 60,000 workers—of virtually absolute independence!

And he lends tens of millions to government.

So much is said of Kreuger by a few persons who know him intimately that their panegyric almost develops a prejudice against the man. Another one of the big business idol builders, we thought as we entered his office—a palace of simple magnificence, decorated in the finest modern Swedish style. But a few words with the man and all hard-boiled cynicism was dissipated.

His Story in Demand

There were to be no direct quotes in the story—for he had given his word to a writer, who had been trying to work up an article for more than a year, not to speak for publication. And he couldn't break his word.

Therefore, while this article may carry a few quotation marks, its contents are first hand. (After all, J. P. Morgan doesn't give interviews at all.)

Even aside from his special fields of engineering and finance, there is hardly anything that Kreuger doesn't know. He is a fluent linguist; has keener insight into the theater, both home and abroad, than most managers on the ground; can tell just where the world's best orchestras are playing —and what; has a sensitive appreciation of art, sculpture, architecture; plays almost invincible poker (a friend tells me); is one of the world's most attentive listeners, and one of its most silent men.

He has developed no hobbies, and hasn't taken much to sport (the usual tendencies following business success.) Yet his physical trim is striking.

How He Selects Men

His face would be that of a Sphynx—were it not for his eyes that pierce clear through. Their size-up is instantaneous, and their judgment seemingly infallible. He picks the men for his companies after a short interview and a long stare.

With them he has successfully fostered enterprises which point for world monopoly, not only in the match industry—best known of the Kreuger expansions—but in vast holding companies, bank direction and control of large natural resources.

Decentralization, rather than centralization—the orthodox method of super-business structure—is the secret of these successful organizations, an associate points out.

Kreuger has many lieutenants with many tasks. When new fields are entered, new assistants are developed. But while the vast work spreads out, the head of it all seems to have an uncanny way of knowing everything of importance at the right time.

A Noiseless Office

There never is any noise or hustle in the Kreuger headquarters, even though orders from them go to all parts of the globe at almost every hour of the clock. There are no gongs or buzzers. Every direction is made by automatic means.

When Kreuger, sitting at his desk, desires to discuss a matter with his colleagues, he merely picks up a special phone—one of four at his side—and the board meeting is on, with each man in his own office, partaking in the discussion without any waste of time.

In such conferences are worldwide movements planned—leading to the Swedish Match Company monopolies in Poland, Greece, Peru, Ecuador, Esthonia, Latvia, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Rumania; and the lending of $75,000,000 to the French government for certain co-operation with its match trade, and $120,000,000 to Germany for a match monopoly— the largest transaction of its kind that ever has taken place between a state and a private industrial group!

Kreuger was born in Kalmar, a small, historic town on the east coast of Sweden, on March 2, 1880. He attended the local public schools, the Stockholm technical high school, studied mechanics, road and water construction, and started to work when he was 20.

Traveled Far

He went to Mexico, South America, the United States, England, France and Germany, gaining experience whenever he could land a job. In 1908 he came home, formed the partnership of Kreuger and Toll, house constructors. This in time, grew into a holding company. Then the young engineer became interested in a small match factory which his father was running. There were many such factories. Competition among them was too keen to make much profits, so Kreuger set out to combine seven of the companies. He succeeded in 1913.

By that time there was another large group in the field, too. Further consolidation seemed desirable. This was effected four years later—and the Swedish Match Company was born.

Kreuger, who engineered the financing, became the match king of the world. He then set out to get control of the raw materials essential to the manufacture of his product. This led to the founding of a host of subsidiary companies—chlorate works, electrolytical plants, paper and pulp concerns.

Ranks High in Wealth

Just what Kreuger's wealth is no one knows—not even the possessor himself. For his fortunes have gone into many financings, the value of which fluctuates day by day on the world's stock exchanges. It is estimated, however, that he doesn't stand far behind the leading American billionaires.

Being unmarried, and looked upon as the prize catch of the age, Kreuger is beset with all kinds of special social invitations. He turns all of them down. For he cares little for society, and believes in having his own parties with friends of his own choosing.

He travels much—often accompanied by a married sister —and has homes in New York (in a penthouse apartment atop of Park Ave.) Berlin, Paris and in three places in Stockholm—always ready for occupancy.

The only thing the man seems to miss is a match, whenever he needs a light. Although his factories turn out millions daily, there never seems to be any for him.

NEW BOOKS AT LIBRARY

IMPORTANT FICTION

Byrne—Field of Honor

On a thread of romance the author has hung a series of events, taking European history from before the battle of Trafalgar to the battle of Waterloo. Says the N. Y. Evening Post—"What the admirers of Don Byrne will like most in his post-humous work is the atmosphere of Ireland. There is the romanticism which leads the Irish to fight for lost causes, the Irish song and folk-lore, and the mad, unaccountable actions of the Irish."

Gale—Borgia

The author here has created a new character—a self centered and self-pitying individual.

Williamson—Hunky

A psychological study of an inarticulate giant whose only means of self-expression is the strength it takes to shift bags of flour all day long. The girls of the bakery mock him, but Jencie plods on unheeding until Teena, boldest of them all, gets herself into trouble and turns to Jencie for help.

Walpole—Hans Frost

The N. Y. Evening Post says of "Hans Frost"—"It is one of the quaintest and at the same time one of the lovliest of Walpole's books. Both the flavor and content of Hans Frost are just a little quaint and old fashioned—and fragrant. There is present a naive wonder that life should in the words of Vladimir, be 'so old.'"

Oliver—As Far as Jane's Grandmothers

Jane's mother ruled her household by her power of non-resistance; Jane's grandmother ruled her household, and Jane's mother by her iron will. Between these two women Jane vibrated, a charming nonentity, even in her love affair, and she lives on a pitiful sacrifice to two women. The Boston Transcript says of "As Far as Jane's Grandmothers": "It is one of those revealing themes, showing how people 'get that way,' and it is terrifyingly true to life. Like so much of the truest and vitalist of modern writing, it is ironical."

Ostenso—Young May Moon

The account of an emotional woman, who leaves her husband in a fit of pique, but returns in a few hours to find he has committed suicide. She and her husband's best friend only know that it is suicide. They live with the knowledge for years until they are able to come to sanity and happiness. Not as strong a novel as "Wild Geese" or "Dark Dawn," but the reader is left with a pleasanter reaction.

De la Roche—White Oaks of Jalna

STATE NURSE HELPS HEALTH TESTS HERE

Miss Helen Felkner, instruction nurse from the state department of health, Columbus, arrived in Xenia Monday and will assist Miss Mary L. Smith, recently appointed City Health Nurse, to start upon her school program of examinations.

In this program all school children will undergo examinations, such as the testing of the eyes, the heart and lungs, to see if the teeth are in good condition and if there is any sign of a skin disease. Following the examination of each child a record will be made and parents of those in need of medical attention will be notified as to what sort of medical attention the child needs.

Work of this kind was begun Wednesday at McKinley School. This work is being conducted all over the state by the city and county health nurses.

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves other troubles caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they are suffering from nausea, from gas, or lack of appetite, etc.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it from your drug store is made in accordance with the original formula from only herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

John G. Bennett, of Kansas City, Mo. (right), was shot and killed by his wife (left) after he failed to make a bid in a bridge game. The Bennetts were entertaining neighbors in their home at bridge. Bennett failed to make his bid. His wife called him a "bum bridge player," whereupon, it is alleged, he slapped her face and folded up the bridge table. She rushed to the bedroom, secured a revolver and shot him twice. He died soon after. Now she is held without bail on a first degree murder charge for early trial

CHEST COMMITTEE TO MEET WEDNESDAY

Plans for Xenia's second annual Community Chest fund campaign to "help others" received further attention at a meeting of the chest executive committee Wednesday night at chest headquarters, re-

With division of the city into fourteen districts in order to simplify the canvass for funds, announcement was made that practically all of the team captains for each district have been appointed and that the complete list will be available soon.
